U. S. SPENDING ABROAD HIT FOR WASTE, UNREST

Ex-WPB Aid Cites 'Dubious Projects.'

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

H. Scott Johnston, former official of the war production board, yesterday told a story of waste, extravagance, and inefficiency in conduct of New Deal agencies directing the so-called "economic warfare" activities in foreign countries.

H. Scott Johnston.

Johnston spent 22 months in Washington as a conservation consultant for the war production board. In this position he reviewed thousands of requisitions of other government agencies for goods to be shipped abroad under the guise of promoting the allied war cause. He quit his position last April because most of the recommendations of himself and his associates were ignored.

Tells "Appalling Ignorance."

Johnson told THE TRIBUNE that there was "appalling ignorance" in Washington of conditions existing in the foreign countries to which the United States sent vast quantities of nonwar goods and equipment.

Hastily conceived projects were launched without adequate preparation, Johnston said. Equipment and materials were shipped to South American countries to carry out projects without knowledge of equipment and materials available there to do the job. Shipping space was wasted and excessive inventories were built up abroad of equipment badly needed in the United States, he said.

Johnston said one of the worst offenders among the New Deal agencies was the office of economic warfare, formerly directed by Vice President Wallace, and now part of the foreign economic administration.

Seed Project Called Example.

As an example Johnston cited the project launched by OEW for stimulating production of oil bearing seeds in South America. This program was undertaken after the Japanese overran the far eastern areas that had been important sources of oils for the United States.

The OEW sent to South American countries thousands of plows, harrows, combines, trucks, and other equipment in furtherance of this program. It was impossible to tell at the beginning, Johnston said, whether the goods being requisitioned bore any sensible relationship to the actual needs. It soon developed, however, that the goods were being requisitioned by OEW without any knowledge of conditions existing in those countries.

One Plow to Each Acre!

"We received one requisition," Johnston said, "for 14,000 plows. Inquiry developed the fact that these plows were intended for use in the cultivation of 16,000 acres—almost one plow for every acre. This occurred at a time when American farmers were crying for additional equipment with which to carry out the government's program for increased food production."

The personnel of the agencies presenting such requisitions in-

Capt. Harrison Recounts New Drake Theory

[Mrs. Frank Starr Williams was murdered in her room in the Drake hotel. Her pretty daughter, Mrs. Patricia Goodbody, nearly shared her fate. The assassin, a "woman in black," escaped. Who was the woman? Why did she commit murder? Every one has asked those questions. Nobody seems to know. But for months, some police disdained the existence of the "woman in black." Charles M. Wilson, talented director of the Chicago police scientific crime detection laboratory believes "there was a third woman in the Drake murder room." In yesterday's article of Capt. Harrison's report on the Drake case, Director Wilson told of the presence of the third woman. He told also how Patricia had suffered powder burns. Today, in Capt. Harrison's continuing report, Mr. Wilson tells of a struggle, of perfumes, and of an infinitesimal flake—a flake no bigger than a pin point—which conceivably, altho remotely, could lead to the slayer.]

Bullet No. 2, in the strange murder of Mrs. Adele Born Williams, was the next object of study by Charles M. Wilson, director of the Chicago police scientific crime detection laboratory.

This bullet penetrated a closet door in the hallway opposite the bathroom, entering the panel 46⅛ inches above the floor. It ricocheted off the door frame at the far side of the connecting closet and inside the closet 29⅝ inches above the floor. This represented an acute downward angle, and in the words of Wilson, "an unnatural course, indicating a wild shot."

Examination of powder residues around the bullet hole in the door indicated that the shot was fired at "not more than 24 inches, and probably 18 inches" from the door. The nearness of the shot and the acute angle of the bullet indicated, Wilson said, that the gunwoman was right handed.

Forced to Face North.

This theory is based on several factors, Wilson said. As the woman fired the first shot—at Patricia—in the bathroom, Mrs. Williams, who was dressing in the bedroom, rushed from the north end of the bedroom into the hallway to intercept her. Mrs. Williams then was facing south. The gunwoman left the bathroom, encountered Mrs. Williams, and, in self-defense, had to face north to confront her.

The gunwoman's right hand then, Wilson explained, was nearest the closet door, which is on the east side of the hall. Mrs. Williams presumably grasped the assassin's gun hand. The gun was fired at close range, so close, indeed, it left powder marks on the white door. The path of the bullet was downward and somewhat forward from a right hand position.

Because of the narrowness of the hall, and because of the presence of another person—Mrs. Williams—blocking off movement to the north, a left handed person, Wilson held, could not have fired that shot into the door at the angle and distance the shot was fired.

Other Evidence Cited.

"There is also evidence in the bathroom that the woman was right handed," said Wilson. "The shot fired at Patricia was on Patricia's left side. Moreover, the theory that

"Get Those Planes Into the Air!"

When Gen. MacArthur tried to safeguard what meager air power he had in the Philippines, why were his orders disobeyed?

Now the whole appalling story of the unreasonable neglect of the Pacific theater by the high command in Washington can be told.

Frazier Hunt, noted correspondent, who has had access to the historical data at MacArthur's headquarters, will start telling in next Sunday's Chicago Tribune what happened in the Philippines and why.

Palisades Park Swept by Fire; 25,000 Flee

Cliffside, N. J., Aug. 13 (AP).—The fourth major fire in three days in the New York City-New Jersey area swept thru Palisades amusement park for 2½ hours today, driving out an estimated 25,000 Sunday pleasure seekers, sending at least 19 persons to hospitals, and destroying about 85 per cent of the park before it was brought under control.

Firemen with apparatus from 14 municipalities battled the flames. Irving Rosenthal, park proprietor, said the damage probably will exceed $1,500,000.

From New York City's Hudson river front a column of smoke could be seen in the afternoon rising from the park on the high Palisades cliffs across the river, long a familiar sight to New Yorkers, especially by night.

Hundreds Get First Aid.

Hundreds of persons, overcome by smoke and heat or injured by sparks and embers which showered from collapsing amusement structures, received first aid treatment from emergency squads of doctors and nurses who arrived from nearby communities in response to radio appeals by Cliffside and Fort Lee police.

Most of 4,000 persons who had sought relief from the heat in the park swimming pool, near the fire's point of origin, milled about in swimming suits anxious about their belongings, while others looked for lost children.

70 to 100 Autos Destroyed.

Between 70 and 100 cars in the parking lot were destroyed. The sound of exploding gas tanks led many to believe there were bombs going off.

William T. Michaelson, public safety commissioner of Cliffside, said the flames had leveled about 75 per cent of the buildings and gutted another 10 per cent in the 49 acre enclosure.

According to witnesses, the fire started when flames burst suddenly from under the Virginia Reel, a circular ride which was loaded with children.

At the swimming pool next to the Virginia Reel, 4,000 persons were caught on the beach and a jam was created at the entrance to a narrow bridge leading to the dressing rooms.

In the panic, Anthony Mattag, 36, of Passaic, N. J., lost his 5½ year old son, Eugene, for whom he was still searching tonight.

A Fort Lee fire truck, which was run up to the swimming pool, was caught in the flames and destroyed.

The fire, which came as a temperature of 100 degrees broke all New Jersey records for the fourth successive day, was the third major resort blaze in three days, coming after the burning of a block of boardwalk and buildings Friday at Wildwood, N. J., and of part of Luna park at Coney Island yesterday.

At Pier 4 in near-by Hoboken, a $4,300,000 fire which started Friday night was still smoldering today.

LAWYER FOUND SHOT TO DEATH IN HOTEL AFTER SUICIDE CALL

Stanley Watson, 51, of 1432 Elmdale av., until recently an attorney for the office of the alien property custodian at 135 S. La Salle st., was found dead in his room in the Statler hotel in St. Louis yesterday, a bullet hole above his heart and a revolver in his right hand.

The body was found as a cousin, Mrs. Nelson Cunliff of Valley Park, a St. Louis suburb, was phoning the hotel to tell the management Watson had called her, saying he intended to end his life.

Watson resigned his Chicago position six weeks ago, other employes in the La Salle st. office said. They said he had been in ill health.

He is survived by his widow, Julia, a son, Lt. John Stanley Watson, now in France; a daughter, Marina, and his father, Judge Albert Watson, of Mount Vernon, Ill., his former home. He left here several days ago to go to Mount Vernon, but never arrived there.

43 Are Hurt as Bus Rams a Steel Pole

Forty-three persons were injured, six seriously, when a west bound Bluebird bus went out of control yesterday and crashed into a steel telephone pole at 5122 63d st.

Paul W. Rode Jr.

Harold Dobro, 28, of 2835 W. 24th st. was trapped within the smashed interior of the bus for 45 minutes. A street car wrecking crew, aided by police, succeeded in prying open a door and extricating him. He suffered a broken left ankle.

List of the Injured.

Others seriously injured: Victor Lesniak, 21, of 2016 W. 21st st., left leg crushed and later amputated; Mrs. Josephine Obrocto, 34, of 1663 N. Francisco av., hip and head injured; Peter Gust, 22, of 2040 W. 21st st., knee injuries; Mrs. Caroline Gura, 54, of 2315 Marquette rd., head injured; Mrs. Anna Weslewski, 52, of 907 N. Richmond st., head and shoulders injured.

Paul W. Rode Jr., 38, of 9505 Ogden av., the bus driver, was among the less seriously hurt. Chicago Lawn police released him after investigation disclosed the accident resulted from a broken steering knuckle.

The crash occurred opposite the building of the United States air transport command at Chicago airport, and a score of the injured were given first aid in the transport building by army personnel.

Others were given emergency treatment in a first aid station at 55th st. and Central av. The more seriously hurt were taken to Holy Cross hospital.

Witnesses said the Joliet bound bus, traveling at a moderate speed, veered sharply to the right, and smashed into the pole. The steel upright ripped more than three feet into the front of the bus.

Impact Blocks Bus Door.

Police reported 51 persons were aboard the bus, many of them standing in the aisle and crowding the space around the front door. The impact of the crash tore seats loose and piled seats and passengers into a heap.

The front of the bus was smashed so that exit thru the door was impossible; most of the passengers crawled thru windows and out the emergency rear exit.

Some of the injured were taken to the office of Dr. Roger Poborski at 6548 65th st., others to the office of Dr. William Riley, 6424 S. Central av.

MAY NOT NEED TO INVADE JAP ISLES: NIMITZ

Sees Chance to Win Without It.

PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Pearl Harbor, Aug. 13 (AP).—Adm. Chester W. Nimitz sees a possibility of defeating Japan without invading the enemy homeland.

Adm. C. W. Nimitz.

"I am not sure or convinced that invasion will be necessary to insure a winning peace," the commander in chief of the Pacific said at a press conference today.

"I do not believe anybody can definitely say that invasion by assault will be necessary until the time comes and the situation is unfolded more than it is at present. However, we should keep in mind the possible necessity of invasion and be prepared for it."

Would Move to Marianas.

The admiral, just returned from a Guam-Saipan inspection trip and conferences with Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher, Vice Adm. Richmond Kelley Turner, and Maj. Gen. Roy S. Geiger of the marine corps and others, disclosed that he is anxious to move his headquarters to a fighting area.

"I am not prepared to say now whether I will advance my headquarters to the Marianas, but I can say that I constantly am on the lookout for an opportunity to move closer to the fighting," he said.

No Single Attack Will Win.

Nimitz expressed his views on the necessity of invading Japan after being asked, "How far can we go in relying on air bombardment to defeat Japan?"

"I do not believe any single form of attack will defeat Japan," he said. "It will have to be a combination of every weapon — sea blockade, air bombardment, possible surface ship bombardment. Already surface ships have bombarded the northern Kuriles. A combination of the whole military effort will bring about the defeat of Japan.

"It hardly seems possible, because of the great distances involved, to deliver the same bomb tonnage on Japan as has been delivered on Germany and German positions in occupied Europe.

Troops' Morale High.

"This war is a new experience for Japan," Nimitz pointed out. "We do not know how much they can take before they'll throw in the sponge. But I certainly believe, no matter what the peace terms, it will be necessary to occupy certain places to insure the peace terms are carried out."

Nimitz was "impressed by the fine spirit and morale of the troops, both the navy afloat and the combat units ashore in the Marianas."

"This time there was no exception," he said. "They're all in fine spirits and are ready to go. They also are in very fine physical condition. I can assure the folks back home these young men never will let them down."

52,323 Japs Killed.

He said the Japanese ground casualties in the Gilberts, Marshalls, and Marianas total 52,323 killed in action and 3,022 prisoners of war plus thousands killed in aerial and surface bombardment. American losses were 5,903 killed.

Asked if any Americans surrendered, Nimitz said, "Indications are a very few of our men got ahead of the lines and were taken prisoner, but I do not believe any surrendered."

In his daily bulletin Nimitz announced earlier that land-based planes bombed Japanese bases from Paramushiro in the north to the Carolines and the mid-Pacific Marshalls Thursdays and Friday.

One Japanese patrol vessel was sunk and a second damaged near Paramushiro, in the Kuriles. Liberators of attacked Chichi Island in the Bonins, 600 miles from Tokyo, hitting the airdrome and a cargo ship. Pagan Island in the Marianas, Rota, near Guam, Truk, and Ponape in the Carolines and the Marshall Islands were bombed.

Russians Drive Germans Close to E. Prussia

LONDON, Aug. 14 [Monday]—(AP).—Russian troops drove yesterday to within 16 miles of the Nazi communications center of Lomza in their flanking movement northeast of Warsaw, and hurled the Germans across the Biebrza river, last big water obstacle before the German east Prussian border, 15 miles beyond.

Russia's 2d Baltic army, almost half way across Latvia in a drive toward the Baltic sea, captured the rail and highway center of Madona, 75 miles east of Riga, Latvian capital. Other units are within 55 miles of Riga on the southeast in the concerted drive aimed at annihilating possibly 200,000 Nazis trapped in Estonia and Latvia.

North of the 2d Baltic army sector another soviet army, the 3d Baltic, captured the rail and highway town of Voru, nearly 38 miles inside Estonia and 95 miles from the Gulf of Riga. This army apparently seeks to seal off Estonia as part of the chopping up of the trapped German divisions.

Near Important Railway.

The rail city of Rouge, eight miles southwest of Voru, also was captured. Its fall put the Russians only 32 miles from Valga. The railway running thru Valga is the backbone of axis defenses in the two Baltic states.

Near southeastern East Prussia the 2d White Russian army virtually had cleared the enemy from a 25 mile section of the east bank of the Biebrza river in a drive toward East Prussia along both sides of the Bialystok-Lyck railway. It was in capturing Menzhenin that Red troops advanced to within 16 miles of Lomza.

Town Near Warsaw Falls.

The 2d White Russian army also captured Mostowka, only 11 miles northeast of Warsaw, in which Polish patriots were reported still fighting the Germans in the streets.

Moscow reported that the 2d and 1st White Russian armies seized 180 places on a 100 mile front during the day.

A Berlin broadcast, admitting a limited German retreat in northern Poland, said the 2d White Russian army had been reënforced with 10 fresh divisions.

Moscow did not mention the progress of its troops in the Carpathian region or in western Latvia and Lithuania. Berlin, however, reported slight Russian gains in Lithuania near Vilkaviskis, 12 miles from the East Prussian frontier.

A special Moscow announcement said the 2d Baltic army had killed or captured nearly 70,000 Germans in a month.

GERMAN WAR REPORT.

Berlin's broadcast war report said yesterday:

"Soviet attacks between the district of the Prut sources and the large Vistula bend were warded off. Planes made successful attacks on soviet tanks west of Baranow.

"Northwest of Bialystok further breakthru attempts, carried out by more than 10 soviet rifle divisions, were checked in heavy fighting.

"On the Latvian front the enemy yesterday again vainly attacked at numerous places. Only southwest of Lake Pskov did he succeed in widening his penetration. Heavy fighting is in progress there.

Intense Heat Brings Ice Rationing in Atlantic City

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 13 [Special].—Ice was placed on a virtual rationed basis in the Atlantic City area today, with the supply for general consumption reduced to 70 per cent of normal. The intense heat has increased demands and ice shipments from other cities have been reduced.

Yank Sets Record of 200 Missions in One War Zone

ROME, Aug. 13 (AP).—Capt. William S. Gatling, 22, Tarboro, N. C., set a new record for American fighter pilots in this theater by flying his 200th mission on a single tour of duty. Gatling began as a Warhawk pilot in the Libyan desert, and now flies a Thunderbolt.

Morgenthau and Winant Luncheon Guests of Eden

LONDON, Aug. 13 (AP).—Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, United States Ambassador John G. Winant, and Dr. Harry D. White, economic director of the treasury department, were luncheon guests today of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden.

FOE RETIRES UNDER HAIL OF ALLIED BOMBS

Canadians, British Tighten Pincer.

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, Aug. 13 (AP). — United States armored columns, in a scythelike sweep northward behind the enemy line, have stormed into Argentan, cutting the last direct escape highway toward Paris for the bulk of the German 7th army retreating in bomb-rent columns thru an escape hatch now narrowed to 18 miles.

One good road, leading northeast from Falaise to Lisieux and indirectly to Paris, remained in Nazi control, but was made hazardous by Canadian artillery fire.

[The Brazzaville radio, heard by CBS, said the allies were only 1½ miles from Falaise.]

Lifting five days of secrecy, supreme allied headquarters disclosed that the United States drive in France beyond Le Mans had pounded 55 miles north to Argentan, within 18 miles of the British and Canadians pinching in from the north of the Germans in the 30 mile deep "coffin corner" of Normandy.

Up to 200,000 Germans Perilled.

Front line dispatches said the German 7th army was in full retreat all the way to Paris thru the narrowing corridor. Thousands of allied bombers and fighters ripped, with great toll, at the congested columns of tanks, trucks, and troops falling back all along the road to Paris.

There was no indication of how many of up to 200,000 Germans engaged in that sector were getting out.

The whole escape corridor was within artillery range of the Americans on the south and the Canadians and British to the north. The allied northern flank was closing in on Falaise, key road hub north of Argentan.

Coupled with these blows from north and south to spring the Normandy trap shut, the United States 1st army at the western end of the bulge opened a general offensive at dawn Sunday, advancing some miles on a front between Vire and Mortain. The Germans fled before them in every conceivable type of vehicle, a front dispatch said.

Advance Thru Alencon.

The American armor forming the southern jaw of the trap—had plunged more than 100 miles thru Nazi lines since it slashed eastward from the Breton peninsula. Then one column hammered northward, from Le Mans, seized Alencon 30 miles away, and punched another 25 miles to Argentan. Argentan perhaps already had been passed.

For five days, while this Le Mans-to-Argentan drive covered 55 miles, supreme headquarters had cloaked the operation in strictest secrecy. There still was no announcement on whether other columns had fanned out east closer toward Paris or in other directions from Le Mans. Le Mans is 110 miles southwest of Paris.

Still a Fighting Retreat.

It still was a fighting retreat, and not yet a rout. But with 20 German divisions and other remnants—hard pressed and tight hemmed it had the potentialities of another Stalingrad trap.

Allied armies already had taken 115,000 prisoners since D-day and contacted 40 Nazi divisions—the cream of the German army in northwest Europe. Since Saturday 5,760 prisoners had been taken.

[A German broadcast said Nazi bombers had struck at Le Mesle on the Sarthe river, 13 miles northeast of Alencon and 83 miles west of Paris. It said there were heavy forces of American tanks and troops at Le Mesle.]

A dispatch from the British front described the German retreat as a mass trek toward the Seine by tens of thousands of vehicles, many fired and torn by bombs.

Yanks Open Greatest Assault.

There was no indication whether Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge hoped to rally for a major stand on the Seine, or even Paris.

The greatest of the new assaults to crush the Germans inside their broken bulge was uncorked at daylight by the American 1st army along the whole half-moon-shaped westernmost tip of the wedge, from which the Nazis a week ago tried to split the allies in Normandy and Brittany.

[Berlin admitted loss of both Mortain and Sourdeval, a few miles to the north.]

The Canadian 1st army lunged ahead two miles to Le Mesnil and Le Biquet in a flanking thrust northwest of Falaise, and there were reports of considerable German movements even out of that last big enemy stronghold.

Make Suicide Stands.

The British 2d army on the Canadian right stabbed in toward Falaise from both sides of the Orne, forging an almost solid front from five to eight miles from that road center.

British forces were within 5,000 yards of the supporting German bastion at Conde, midway between Falaise and Vire. But enemy resistance continued stiff. Suicide stands were made in Thury-Harcourt, where fighting still continued, and in other localities.

Despite the formidable defenses, the British and Canadians had gained five to 10 miles all along a 25 mile front during the last week.

[The German broadcasts, besides reporting a push beyond Alencon—itself halfway between Le Mans and Falaise—said Nazi advance patrols had pushed 43 miles down the road from Chartres before meeting the Americans. This would place United States forces at least 25 miles east of Le Mans, and perhaps 85 miles from Paris.]

No Word on Loire River.

There was no further official word on operations south of the Loire river, where the Americans had pushed 10 miles south of Nantes two days ago.

[The mystery attaching to allied intentions was further heightened, by German broadcasts saying the German troops had fallen back south of the Loire between allied held Nantes and Angers, but denying that the Americans had yet crossed the river.]

The Germans still held on to their last stronghold in the citadel of St. Malo on Brittany's north coast, and the situation apparently was not greatly changed around the besieged U-boat and naval bases of St. Nazaire, Lorient, and Brest.

GERMAN WAR REPORT.

The German Sunday war bulletin as broadcast from Berlin and recorded by the Associated Press in New York said:

"On the front on both sides of the Orne river and south of Vire the enemy made numerous incoherent attacks which led to embittered fighting and were mostly repulsed. Fighting for several dents is still going on.

"Fighting in the Alencon area was extended farther to the north and is increasing in intensity.

"After violent attacks from the air, the Americans renewed the attack on St. Malo. They were once again repulsed in violent fighting in which our coastal and flak artillery effectively took part. The enemy suffered severe losses. An enemy group which had broken into the town was thrown back in a counter-thrust. Prisoners were taken.

"Escorting vessels of the German navy sank an enemy E-boat in waters west of La Havre and heavily damaged another. Naval flak artillery and escorting vessels shot down 15 enemy bombers over the western and southern French coast.

"In the French hinterland 102 terrorists were wiped out in fighting.

"Retaliatory fire on London continues."

Yanks Cut Nazi Escape Route in Wide Sweep

REVEAL AIRMEN WRECKED HUGE NAZI AIRDROME

RENNES, France, Aug. 10 [Delayed]—(AP).—The Rennes airdrome captured by the Americans covers more acres than LaGuardia field in New York and is one of the largest and best equipped fields the Germans had in France. The field had 18 hangars, and two new concrete runways, one 4,360 feet long and the other slightly over 5,000 feet, which the Germans had built. Taxiways and parking areas extended two and a half miles into the cover of woods.

But American and British bombers had left only four of the 18 large hangars standing and these four were damaged. More than 90 bomb craters were counted on the runways.

Every vital installation except the hospital and the flying control office in a deep underground concrete shelter had been blasted. Several small buildings had been camouflaged to resemble huge ant hills, Capt. William Hendrickson, 142 W. 107th st., Chicago, Ill., reported.

ROBOT ATTACKS EASE UP; FLYERS INTERCEPT SOME

LONDON, Aug. 13 (AP). — Sharp eyed fighter pilots and anti-aircraft gunners beat back flying bomb attacks today, exploding a number of the missiles over the sea as southern England and London enjoyed a comparatively quiet Sunday.

A few robots got thru, however, inflicting battle scars on two churches, one of which dates back to the 12th century; a famous English school, a hospital, a postoffice, and wrecking a row of 14th century houses.

Deaths were not high and a dozen persons were dug out of the wreckage after amazing escapes.

U. S. PERFECTS GASOLINE TO FIT SUPER-BOMBERS

Fuel May Put Tokyo on 'Suburban Line.'

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13 (AP).—A super-gasoline powerful enough to enable giant bombers to perform at their maximum capabilities in raiding Japan has been developed by American chemists and will go into production when the military gives the command.

The petroleum industry war council announced today that approximately 80 per cent of the nation's high octane gasoline capacity is primed to switch to the new fuel with minor changes in facilities.

Chemical details were withheld, but the council said the super-gasoline has a "vastly improved octane rating" over the 100 octane fuel now used in battle planes.

Fuel Called World's Finest.

The council called the "X" octane gasoline "the world's finest flying fuel" and said it was designed to "draw from the futuristic B-32 bombers, lethal B-29 Super-Fortresses, and the most modern fighter escort planes their originally intended maximum in sustained speed, short take-offs, combat radius, and load carrying capabilities."

The announcement said oil industry scientists predict quantity production of the new gasoline would permit "possible allied bombing of the Japanese mainland on a suburban service schedule."

The signal for production is expected to be given "as and when military plans permit"—that is, "should a shift in American military strategy suddenly call for a change in 100 octane aviation gasoline production from volume to volatility."

Change in Schedule Likely.

William R. Boyd Jr., chairman of the industry council, announced that because of present military requirements, volume production of the new fuel must follow the quantity production of present grade aviation gasoline for prosecution of the European war.

"It has been estimated that in the fall of 1944 it may be necessary to produce a considerable amount of this improved aviation gasoline," Boyd said.

He said the new fuel is "100 octane rebuilt chemically," adding that oil industry scientists, helped by new and delicate instruments, have been perfecting their means of analyzing high octane composition, and that 100 octane motor fuel has been lifted from the "groping laboratory stage."

Marauding 'Wolf Dog' Caught in Trap, Shot

Jerseyville, Ill., Aug. 13 (AP).—A marauding "wolf dog" which for two years had preyed on Jersey county live stock was caught in a specially prepared trap today and shot by Lloyd Vinson. Farmers and trappers said the animal either was a German shepherd dog or a three-quarter breed wolf.

BOMBERS SMASH AT NAZIS ALONG RETREAT ROADS

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 13.—The full fury of the United States 8th air force's heavy bombers today was turned on German highway communications, including main and secondary routes to the rear of the French front vital to the maintenance of the Nazis' present positions or withdrawal to the east.

A total of 1,250 Flying Fortresses and Liberators struck at a dozen road intersections on both sides of the Seine river as well as heavy gun positions at St. Malo and the near-by Ile de Cezembre.

It was the first time the heavies were used to paralyze the enemy's road movements. Their targets were in a concentrated area thru which the enemy must move to escape the allied trap closing between Argentan and Falaise.

No Fighter Opposition.

Bomber crews reported seeing heavy traffic movement eastward behind the German lines. They also reported that they encountered only slight anti-aircraft fire or fighter opposition.

Objectives along both sides of the Seine from Paris northwest to the river mouth, including the important railroad bridge of Le Manoir, southwest of Rouen, were attacked. Intersections hit were in the vicinity of Bernay, Elbeus, Rouen, Buchy, Conches, Gisors, Quille, Damville, St. Leger, Meulan, and Hernonville.

Medium bombers struck at road junctions near Lisieux and Rugles in the vicinity of Laigle and closer to the enemy rear. Fighters and fighter-bombers had another field day roving over a wide area approximately 5,000 square miles between Le Havre, Mons, and Vitry in search of German trains and other transportation vehicles.

Hound and Hare Chase.

Today and yesterday Mustangs, Thunderbolts and Lightnings were out at dawn with missions scheduled until dusk aimed at crippling Nazi supply facilities.

Lt. Col. Kenneth W. Gallop, Flint, Mich., who led the first of today's four Thunderbolt missions, compared the assignment to a hound and hare chase. Lt. Max B. Hungate, also of Flint, said the early mission caught Germans on the road with "trucks as far as you could see."

Marauders and Havocs late in the day bombed rail bridges at Cerisy, Peronne, and Doullens and a fuel transfer point at Corviel, with a loss of two Marauders.

Blast Oil Tanks at Bordeaux.

After dark British Lancasters, keeping up the incessant campaign against the enfeebled submarine menace, blasted oil storage depots at Bordeaux after having blasted submarine pens at Brest.

The 8th's fighter bombers during the day destroyed or damaged 2,110 railway cars, 221 locomotives, 217 military trucks, and 79 other vehicles in addition to plastering 23 freight yards, 14 bridges, and three tunnels. They lost eight planes.

Twelve heavy bombers were lost during the day.

Mediterranean heavy bombers again smashed at military targets in southern France, in northern Italy and Yugoslavia. Heavy, medium and fighter bombers hammered at gun emplacements, radio installations, and other objectives along the French Riviera. Liberators struck at rail bridges over the Rhone.

The R. A. F. Saturday night roared over Germany and dumped explosives on aircraft and engineering plants at Brunswick, the huge open aircraft and motor transport works at Russelsheim, which employes 35,000 workers, the port of Kiel and Frankfort.

Do You Know How LITTLE a Personal Loan Need Cost?

Why Pay More THAN THIS LOW COST?

For a 12 mo. $100 LOAN
At Usual Small Loan Rate, You Pay $20.84
At Merchandise Bank You Pay Only 8.00
YOU SAVE $12.84

For a 12 mo. $200 LOAN
At Usual Small Loan Rate, You Pay $39.52
At Merchandise Bank You Pay Only 16.00
YOU SAVE $23.52

*Savings shown apply to "signature only" loans repaid in 12 monthly instalments, cost to be deducted in advance. You can save even more if you borrow with one co-maker. In either case, you save at least half of usual and lawful Small Loan Charges.

IF—for borrowing $100 you've had to repay 12 payments of $10.07 each—that amounts to $120.84—which is $20.84 more than you borrowed. And $20.84, therefore, is what that loan cost you.

That same amount, $100, at Merchandise Bank would cost you only $8.00—on your signature only. It would cost you only $5.50—with one co-maker. So—here you would save at least $12.84—or as much as $15.34—depending on which plan you borrow.

Money In Your Pocket

What you save, in either case, is money in your pocket. It amounts to nearly as much as two payments on your loan. That's the difference between usual small loan charges and Merchandise Bank's extremely low rates.

If you need a loan, or want to reduce present borrowing costs, get in touch with Merchandise Bank. There's no need to take time off your job. Simply phone Whitehall 4500, or write, and everything can be quickly and confidentially arranged.

HOW THE TEXAS, QUEEN OF FLEET, SILENCED FORTS

Battleship Hit by Shell but Fights On.

BY LT. WELDON JAMES.
Marine Corps Public Relations Officer.
[Distributed by the Associated Press.]

Capt. Chas. A. Baker.

ABOARD THE U. S. S. TEXAS, off Cherbourg [Delayed].—In a three hour duel with German coastal batteries today this proud old queen of the older fleet sustained two direct hits, and had to fight two fires on the main deck.

But she fought back like an Amazon. Three times she roared back, swerving, twisting, turning, in a maze of exploding geysers, with her 14 inch guns blasting half ton projectiles at the enemy forts.

Midway of her second run past, German gunners scored the perfect hit. A shell hit dead on top of the conning tower, blew up with terrific noise into the navigation bridge eight feet above, mortally wounded the helmsman, seriously wounded four others, and wrecked a third of the bridge and some of its controls.

Before the smoke had cleared away, Capt. Charles A. Baker, 50, of Washington, D. C., commanding officer, had completed his order: "Clear the bridge . . . all hands below . . ." and carried on, then from the conning tower.

Ammunition Explodes.

Flame from our own guns ignited gun covers and gun locked gear on the fantail. The blast broke open ammunition boxes, scattered 40 millimeter shells over the hot deck. Forty-five caliber bullets began exploding in the midst of the rolling, half broken shells.

Marine crews dashed in to throw the ammunition overboard, while sailors helped extinguish the flames. Marine Capt. A. A. Bernard, 26, of Norwich, Conn., directing the Leathernecks, had to pull his men back, send them in again between salvos—our 14 inch guns blasting just over their heads would kill them. But they got the ammunition overboard, and the sailors extinguished the fire.

German shells continued to roar over us, or to fall just short of us, hurtling shell fragments and mountains of water over the decks.

Shell Fails to Explode.

A 240 millimeter armor-piercer that blasted thru the port bow fell without exploding into the empty cabin of M. A. Clark, ship's clerk, 38, of Alachua, Fla., and lay there. The shell disposal officer, Lt. [j. g.] James D. Ford, 26, of New York City, moved in with his crew, smothered it with mattresses, decided to nurse it along back to a British port.

In the midst of the torment, an admiring destroyer ahead flashed back with the battle cry famous since the last war: "Come on, Texas."

At the end the appreciative commodore of the minesweeper flotilla signalled thanks "for staying in there with us and taking all the slugging—otherwise several of us would certainly have been sunk."

And the army, from the coast, noting that several of the enemy fortresses had been silenced, signalled its thanks for a sorely needed job "well done."

Destroyer Is Hit.

The fleet included the American battleships Nevada and Arkansas, the cruisers Tuscaloosa and Quincy, the British cruisers Glasgow and Enterprise, an Anglo-American destroyer flotilla, and the minesweepers.

One of our destroyers, the U. S. S. O'Brien, sustained a direct hit, and 10 of her company were killed and 12 wounded. Another destroyer, the Barton, escaped with insignificant damage.

The fleet commander was Rear Adm. Morton L. Deyo, 57, of Kittery Point, Me., aboard the Tuscaloosa. His first bombardment force headed by the Nevada, tackled the German fortifications on the western line of the Cherbourg peninsula. His second, commanded by Rear Adm. Carleton F. Bryant, 52, of Searsport, Me., aboard his flagship Texas, engaged those of the eastern line.

No Surprise for Nazis.

It was an engagement of a type rare in the history of the United States navy, unthinkable save for the magic of modern naval gunnery. The German fortresses were bristling with six, nine, and 11-inch guns. The area was heavily mined.

There was no element of surprise; the Germans had long expected the fleet, and it came, in broad daylight, searching for its targets along a coast obscured by haze and smoke.

We were well within German range long before 12 o'clock. With the Texas leading, we moved in closer, narrowing the distance to 14,000 yards. The Arkansas opened up first, but our plane spotter had difficulty locating our targets.

The next moment there were geysers in the sea 400 yards ahead, straddling the nearest destroyer. Then the geysers were rising about us.

The battle was joined. Several minutes later we had our target—found by its flashes as seen by our spotters aloft—and ended our agony of inaction with mighty salvos from the main batteries.

German shells roared over us, fell short of us, dead ahead, dead aft, along the water line. The mighty old "Tex," sped up, slowed, swerved in obedience to her calculating captain.

Sixty-five times, her officers counted, the Germans straddled or near-missed the Texas.

As calm as the busy captain were the navigator, Lt. Comdr. Louis P. Spear, U. S. N., 27, of Berkeley, Cal., and the communications officer, Lt. Forrest S. Drummond, 33, of New York City, ex-associate professor at the University of Chicago law school.

Administer to Wounded.

Inside the bridge, with the smoke clearing, Lt. Comdr. Spear and Chaplain Clarence Moody, aided by Ship's Clerk Clark and several yeomen, administered morphine to the wounded.

Elsewhere on the ship there were other wounded. But the Texas' traditional luck was still with her. Despite the virtual perfection of the German shooting, there were no more direct hits. The damage, tho extensive, was superficial, the casualties incredibly few, compared with what they might have been.

The Texas was still fighting, blasting away now with terrific eight-gun salvos. I watched the remainder of the battle from the conning tower, whence, before I arrived, I saw two corpsmen supporting the gunnery officer, Lt. Comdr. Richard B. Derickson, U. S. N., 34, of Minisink, Pa. He had been inside the 14 inch armor of the conning tower. The German shell had sheared off the main battery fire director hanging just over Derickson's head. By a miracle, the huge weight only grazed him.

Other ships were hit. Adm. Deyo decided to "double the dose"—the bombardment lasted three hours instead of the originally planned 90 minutes, until the army called it off at 3 o'clock.

We headed for our port in Britain, battered and shaken, but full of a thankful spirit.

BRITISH WARSHIPS SINK 6 NAZI SUPPLY VESSELS OFF FRANCE

LONDON, Aug. 13 (AP).—British warships sank at least six German supply ships and trawlers off the French coast yesterday in a series of small scale skirmishes ranging from Le Havre in the channel to the Bay of Biscay and came away without loss, a war bulletin announced today.

The Berlin radio said 40 British bombers damaged two escort vessels in an attack on a German convoy this morning north of Spiekeroog Island, one of the East Frisian Islands off the northwest tip of Germany.

Two of the attacking planes were shot down and merchant vessels in the convoy reached their destination "in full strength," the broadcast said. There was no allied confirmation.

ST. MALO'S FORT REPULSES FIRST YANK ASSAULT

WITH AMERICAN TROOPS BESIEGING ST. MALO CITADEL, Aug. 12 [Delayed]—(AP).—Stubborn Col. Andreas von Aulock and the Nazi garrison still held on to their redoubtable seagirt fortress in St. Malo harbor tonight after a picked American assault group reached the inner wall of the rocky citadel but was unable to crack an entrance.

This fort is set into the ground to a depth of about 50 feet and beneath it is a network of underground tunnels extending in all directions from the water's edge.

It has heavy and all but impregnable pillboxes staggered along its top so that all approaches are covered with crossfire.

It's a Tough Nut.

The fort is surrounded on three sides by the sea and the only way to attack it is across a narrow bottleneck of land with 500 yards of open ground to traverse before the wall is reached. This open ground is heavily fortified with trip wires, barbed wire, anti-tank obstacles, and mines.

The whole area is under fire from heavy caliber naval guns on harbor islands and from closer guns emplaced along the waterfront itself.

The first actual assault on the citadel itself was made under command of Maj. John Speedie of San Antonio, Tex., after the approaching streets had been cleared of desperate Nazi defenders. The storming force was led by Lt. John J. Warkowitz of Carteret, N. J.

Assault Troops Move In.

Here's what they did:

American artillery laid down a 20 minute barrage on pillboxes posted to fire on the land approach. Hoping to catch the enemy before he could return to his gun positions, the assault troops ran forward as soon as the fire lifted. They were accompanied by flamethrowers and engineers.

Artillery then resumed fire, this time trying to knock out the German guns along the waterfront only a few hundred yards away.

First Wall Scaled.

Surrounding the fort on the land approach, the doughboy outfit quickly scaled the wall only to find that it was an outer wall and they were in a moat betwen two great stone barriers. They fought back savagely at the pillboxes and at enemy machine gunners firing from slits back of the outer wall.

To get at the troops stationed deep in the side of the fortress, the doughboys tossed grenades down the ventilators. Working their way along one wall, despite intense German fire from the front and rear, two squads forced an entrance into a room built in one corner, but found it was a blind apartment with no access to the interior fortress.

Nazis Shell Own Fort.

Unable to force an entrance at any point, the remainder of the assault force finally was ordered to withdraw. As it fought its way back across the outer wall, Nazi naval guns out in the harbor reopened fire, shelling the top of their own fortress in an attempt to destroy the Yanks. That was how confident they were that the fortress was impregnable to artillery bursts.

"This is the strongest German fortification we have come against," said an American officer. "But it will be taken. Von Aulock said he would make a new Stalingrad of this place, and that's what he is going to get, and the story will have the same ending as the Stalingrad the Germans had in Russia."

Big Girl Now

Linda Delevitt, who weighed 1 pound 13 ounces at birth, looks over her 16 pound 13 ounce reading on eve of first birthday.

Linda Hope Delevitt, who tipped the scale at 29 ounces to win the distinction of being the tiniest baby ever born in a Chicago hospital, will be one year old tomorrow.

It was an eventful year for Linda, for she was kept busy adding a total of 240 ounces to the 29 she started out with. Her present weight is 16 pounds and 13 ounces, which for Linda is pretty hefty. She was born last Aug. 15 in Mount Sinai hospital to Mr. and Mrs. Al Delevitt of 3955 Van Buren st.

They said she loves food of all kind, drinks plenty of milk, and has a beautiful sun tan. Three grandparents, several uncles and aunts, and a lot of friends will help celebrate the baby's first anniversary.

NAZI PRISONER GIVES AID TO AN OLD CLASSMATE

NINTH AIR FORCE ADVANCE HDQ., France, Aug. 10 [Delayed].—An air force intelligence officer needed information on vital German installations so he sent for a prisoner who reportedly had worked on them. When the prisoner walked into the tent, there was a stunned silence. After a terse exchange of greetings the German sat down and talked. Later an official report stated simply that the target was bombed—it did not mention the German prisoner and the air intelligence officer were classmates at a well known university in the United States.

Wounded Paratroopers Arrive in U.S. from France

Charleston, S. C., Aug. 13 (AP).—American paratroopers wounded when they dropped on the Cherbourg peninsula on D-day, were landed at the Charleston port of embarkation today from the hospital ship Wisteria.

READING FOR GI'S IN BRITAIN WAITS UPON CONGRESS

BY WILLIAM STRAND.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Army officials here are waiting to learn details of a proposed amendment to the soldier vote law regarding reading matter for troops before deciding whether regulations can be relaxed.

The news that Sen. Taft planned to introduce an amendment permitting soldiers to buy British papers and magazines at army camps was carried in the London press. The stories merely said, however, that the amendment would "remove practically all restrictions."

Whether this affects plans for picking three American papers for distribution to G. I.s before the election is not known.

Confusion Laid to Law.

The confused situation arises from a proviso in the soldier vote legislation. An amendment to the Hatch act, it bans government sponsorship of delivery to soldiers and sailors of any newspaper, radio, magazine, or movie material containing political propaganda designed to affect results of the forthcoming elections.

The measure states that it must not be construed as preventing distribution to members of the armed forces of books, magazines or newspapers with general circulation in the United States.

Nor, the act states, shall it be construed as preventing presentation before the troops of motion picture films, radio broadcasts, and rebroadcasts. Then follows a list of exceptions and reservations. Newspapers and magazines must be selected in accordance with the preference of the fighting men by a method acceptable to the secretaries of war and the navy.

Subscriptions Unaffected.

It has been made plain a soldier or a sailor may receive reading matter he desires by private subscription, or have it sent from home.

The sale of British papers or magazines at army camps is outlawed because such periodicals do not possess general circulation in the United States. Service men may buy such publications outside camps.

The army has a list of the soldier preferences for magazines that may be sold at post exchanges and is making plans to select the representative three newspapers that the soldiers want to read. Its theory is that thru these the G. I.s will be able to make up their minds for whom to vote.

More German Troops Reported Leaving Finland

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, Aug. 13 (AP).—The newspaper Allehanda, quoting dispatches from Mariehamn, Finland, said today another contingent of German troops, size unknown, had left Finland thru the port of Turku.

[A Reuters dispatch received in London from Stockholm said several Nazi transports were seen off the Aland Islands steaming south from Finland to Germany.]

Mistakes Dog for Lion, Fires and Kills Boy, 13

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 13 (AP).—Mistaking a dog for a mountain lion, Sheriff's Deputy Seymour Lund fired at the animal today and killed its 13 year old master, Jerry Bernordin, Lund reported to Inspector Walter Hunter. The accident occurred in the Malibu hills. The sheriff's office said a full investigation would be made.

ITALIANS HUNT DOWN FASCISTS INSIDE FLORENCE

AMG Moves in Food by Human Chain.

WITH THE 8TH ARMY IN FLORENCE, Italy, Aug. 13 (AP).—Gunfire still crackled in the streets of Florence today, but Italian Partisans were relentlessly cleaning up the city street by street.

The Germans, who have dug in north of the city, have blown up all but one bridge over the canal in that part of the city. Late yesterday the Nazis sent two tanks to fire a few rounds down several streets. Little damage resulted.

Partisans are everywhere in the city, some riding bicycles and carrying tommy guns over their shoulders and others atop small sedans.

Woman Sniper Executed.

Three more Fascists, two men and a woman, were lined up beside the church of Santa Maria Novella and executed yesterday for sniping. Ten others had been executed.

An area about two miles by half a mile in the north part of the city has been pretty well cleared of snipers.

The only connection between the newly freed northern part of Florence and the southern section was over the famous Ponte Vecchio, useable by pedestrians only, and a foot wide dam a few hundred yards down the river which was heavily mined.

AMG [allied military government] officials are providing food for those of Florence's 300,000 citizens who are in the northern area. They have transported more than 12 tons over the Ponte Vecchio with a human chain of workers passing supplies by hand.

Women Robbed by Nazis.

For a week before the Germans left they pillaged the shops and gathered all transport, including hearses and wagons. Women and men on the streets were stripped of their jewelry.

The theft of the hearses caused much inconvenience and mortuaries were crowded with dead.

Mrs. Tessie Passante of New York, whose husband is a geologist, said, "the Germans behaved badly last week. My husband couldn't go out and whenever I went out for water I took off all my rings."

Mrs. Elizabeth Carney, formerly of Chicago, found refuge with 20 Irish nuns.

Citizens said many of the city's manholes concealed mines and it was assumed some would soon explode.

Empoli Falls Without Fight.

ROME, Italy, Aug. 13 (AP).—Empoli fell to the 8th army without a fight today as German patrols probed allied lines.

Empoli is about 15 miles west of Florence on the south bank of the Arno river. It had been stoutly defended by the Germans in retreat toward their Gothic line, but 8th army tanks and infantry found it clear except for snipers when they moved in.

A proclamation from Adolf Hitler, it was disclosed, told the Germans in Italy that the "defensive phase" of the war would soon end and the German army would be on the march again.

5th Army Patrols Fight.

A number of German and 5th army patrols tangled in brisk fighting on the south banks of the lower Arno, but there was no major engagement anywhere along the entire front yesterday, an allied bulletin said.

Poles and Italians on the Adriatic sector enlarged their bridgehead across the Cesano river.

Lt. Col. Eggers, commander of the German 4th parachute regiment, which held out long at Cassino, has been recaptured by Britons after escaping from patriots.

TROLLEY LINES SET TO RESUME IN MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Que., Aug. 13 (AP).—Montreal wound up its 11th day without street cars and buses tonight as preparations were completed for full resumption of service tomorrow with the Montreal Tramways company under temporary government control.

A strike of 4,000 trolley and bus operators, seeking a union shop clause in the contract between the company and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employes, a Canadian C. I. O. affiliate, was declared officially ended late yesterday. A few hours after the federal government announced appointment of two controlers to operate the company.

Still unsettled was the union shop clause. In taking over the company's 950 trams and 300 buses, the government set a 60 day period to decide this issue.

Merchant Marine Lists 2 Chicagoland Men Lost

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13.—The United States merchant marine today announced the names of 34 casualties. The list includes casualties from 15 states and names one dead and 33 missing. Two men from Chicagoland named in the release are Russell Edwin Horgesheimer, missing; wife, Mrs. Russell E. Horgesheimer, 936 Clinton st., Gary, Ind., and Robert Charles Henter, missing; sister, Mrs. Emma Radtke, 814 Vine st., Manistee, Mich.

CHARGES BRITISH BACK MONARCHY TO RULE ITALY

ROME, Aug. 13 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill's visit has been seized upon by the Italian press and political leaders as an opportunity to intensify their appeals for the allies to allow a greater participation of Italian troops at the front and to revise the armistice conditions.

[The British radio, in a broadcast to Europe hinting at "big new movements" in the Mediterranean theater, said Marshal Tito and Dr. Ivan Subasic, premier of the Yugoslav government in exile, had joined Churchill, Lt. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell and Assistant Secretary of War Robert Patterson in Rome, NBC reported.]

Randolfo Pacciardi, a leader of the Republican party, which is not represented in the six-party coalition government, reiterated today a suggestion heard on all sides that the British are supporting the monarchy.

Addressing a mass meeting, Pacciardi said "Churchill often has said 'One man alone' was responsible for bringing Italy into the war."

Blames King, Crown Prince.

"He is wrong," the Republican leader said, "for the king, his son, Crown Prince Umberto, and the army chief of staff [Badoglio] shared the responsibility with Mussolini."

During the speech which was frequently interrupted by anti-monarchial outbursts, Pacciardi, who led the Italian Garibaldi legion against the Fascists in Spain and who recently returned from the United States, said that "if it had not been for President Roosevelt we still would be under the German heel."

Favors European Union.

He added that the interest of the United States was in healing Europe so that Americans will not be sacrificed every generation and the only way to do this is to work for a "United States of Europe."

In an open letter to Churchill, the Action party newspaper, Italia Libera said, "We are right in asking that he make himself the interpreter before his parliament and before his allies of the state of mind of the Italian people.

"We would like to know—our government has said so to the allies—what is the law of war which governs us," the article continued. "We would like to be able to lay the first brick of reconstruction under your control but with clear responsibility and autonomy."

10,000 Party Chiefs Dig East Defenses, Say Nazis

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 13.—A Berlin broadcast says Dr. Robert Ley, German labor front leader, today declared 10,000 Nazi party leaders have been thrown into what he calls a "great digging campaign for defense in the east which is the final round of the war." More than 5,000 Nazi chiefs, he said, already are engaged at work in Lithuania and Poland, "living almost without shelter or food, sleeping on the ground, and digging and hacking and building for 12 hours or more daily."

British Report Death of Nazi Baltic General

WITH THE AEF IN ITALY, Aug. 5 [Delayed]—(AP).—Pvt. Stanley Wrona of Chicago is an artillery man in Italy. His brother, Sgt. Chester Wrona, is with an ack-ack outfit in Italy. They hadn't seen each other in three years altho each knew the other was somewhere in the same theater.

The other day, Stan, driving a truck in a convoy along the road, met another truck and heard: "Hey, Stan, where are you going?" Stan stuck his head out the truck window and got a quick flash of his brother going in the opposite direction. He only had time to holler, "Up front!—where are you going?" But Chester disappeared in a dust cloud before he had time to answer.

Stan hopes it won't be another three years before they meet again.

FESTIVAL NAMES FAUSTO CLEVA AS 3D VOICE JUDGE

Bianca Saroya, Carter Serve with Him.

FESTIVAL TICKETS.

Only a few more days are left to obtain reserved tickets by mail for the 15th Chicago Music Festival in Soldiers' field Saturday night. Prices are $1.25 and 80 cents, federal tax included. Check or money order should be made payable to Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc. Please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Tickets also are on sale at The Tribune Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn st., and in Tribune Tower.

BY PHILIP MAXWELL.

Fausto Cleva, the new general artistic director of the Chicago Opera company, yesterday was appointed the third judge of the final vocal contest of the 15th annual Chicago Music Festival. The appointment was announced by Mrs. Edmund J. Tyler, chairman of the voice contest, which will have its finals in Soldiers' field before 90,000 persons Saturday night.

Fausto Cleva.

The other two judges, previously announced, are Bianca Saroya and Chief Specialist John Carter of the United States navy. Miss Saroya has sung leading roles with many opera companies thruout the world, and Carter, a member of the Metropolitan Opera company, will be the guest soloist this Saturday night in Soldiers' field.

Came to America in 1920.

Cleva began his musical education in Trieste, Italy, and received his diploma in the Giuseppe Verdi Conservatory of music in Milan. He conducted many operas in European theaters and came to America in 1920. He has been with the Metropolitan for 22 years as chorus master and conductor. He had charge of several of the Metropolitan auditions of the air.

Ten young war plant employes, all with a given name of Adeline, are awaiting to appear Friday noon at the finals of the festival's Sweet Adeline contest to be conducted at the 8th annual festival luncheon in the Terrace Casino of the Morrison hotel. The 10 won out Saturday night in the semi-finals for 20 Adelines at the Chicago Theater of the Air performance before 35,000 persons in Grant park. Nearly 5,000 ballots were tabulated by a crew of 30 workers under the supervision of Nelson J. Goodsell, certified public accountant.

Winners' Names Listed.

The winners, their ages, addresses, and the numbers they carried at the bandshell are as follows: Mrs. Ahlgrim, 22, of 4117 W. 31st st. [1]; Miss Borta, 21, of 2606 Iowa st. [3]; Miss Blaski, 21, of 1644 N. Mozart st. [4]; Mrs. Christensen, 24, of 8245 Ridgeland av. [5]; Miss Dullins, 19, of 1223 Darrow av., Evanston [7]; Miss Holm, 21, of 6930 S. Claremont av. [8]; Mrs. Kotowski, 28, of 8700 Baltimore av. [10]; Mrs. Morton, 21, of 6800 Ridgeland av. [13]; Miss Pacelli, 23, of 525 N. Marshfield av. [16], and Miss Piscitelli, 22, of 504 S. Morgan st. [17].

Each of the winners will receive a $25 war bond and the young lady chosen "queen" Friday noon will be given a $100 war bond.

Ten to Ride Into Field.

All 10 will ride into Soldiers' field Saturday night and the winner will be crowned queen of the festival by Harry Armstrong, New York composer of "Sweet Adeline." Climaxing the ceremony, 90,000 persons will serenade the queen by singing this popular song, under the direction of Carl Craven.

Two festival activities will take place today. At 6 p. m. Dr. Edgar Nelson will hold the first rehearsal of the Hallelujah chorus group in Orchestra Hall and at 7 p. m. Capt. Howard Stube will conduct a practice of the festival trombone choir in the Lyon and Healy concert hall, at 64 E. Jackson blvd.

Sharing the Cold on Hot Day

Hottest Aug. 13

Yesterday was the hottest Aug. 13 in the history of the Chicago weather bureau. The mercury soared to 98.5 at 4:10 p. m. The previous high for the date was 96.2 on Aug. 13, 1918.

Yesterday was likewise the 31st day this year on which the temperature was 90 or above. That tied the all-time high record of 31 such days established in 1934.

But Forecaster G. L. Canaday said the back of the heat wave will be broken today or tomorrow.

He expects the high temperature today to be 88.

BRAIN AILMENT SUFFERED BY RIVER VICTIM

Mrs. Virginia Basso, 25, of 1369 E. 70th st., whose death Friday night while attending a party on the cruiser Hyvac moored near Randolph st. in the Chicago river resulted in a police investigation, had suffered a brain hemorrhage, Dr. Victor Levine, coroner's physician, said yesterday after an autopsy.

The autopsy also disclosed water in the woman's lungs, Dr. Levine said. Mrs. Basso fell into the river from a dinghy in which William Schreiber, 37, of 4144 Berkeley av., a guest at the party, also was sitting. Schreiber was held by East Chicago avenue police for the inquest at 10 a. m. today at 4141 Cottage Grove av.

Dr. Levine said there was no evidence of violence, and that there was no bruise on the head. Mrs. Dorothea Hill, 7215 Yates av., Mrs. Basso's sister, told police Mrs. Basso was subject to heart attacks.

2 DIE IN PLANE CRASH.

Newton, N. J., Aug. 13 [New York News].—George W. Law, 25, of Nutley, N. J., the pilot, and his passenger, Henry Marino of Little Ferry, N. J., were killed today when their small private plane crashed six miles from here.

N. Y. ELECTORS URGED TO SPURN RED NOMINATION

New York, Aug. 13 [Special].—Former Rep. John J. O'Connor, chairman of the executive committee of the American Democratic national committee, today urged presidential electors for New York state to decline the "dishonor" of their nomination by the "Communist controled" American Labor party.

Sidney Hillman.

O'Connor sent an identical telegram to all the electors. It read:

"Public records on file in Albany disclose that at the convention of the Communist controled Labor party, presided over by Sidney Hillman, you were unanimously nominated presidential elector of that anti-American cell. Your Americanism and respectability should compel you to decline that dishonor before deadline Monday midnight."

The word "cell" is used to denote a Communist unit by the Communists themselves.

O'Connor's group is opposing a fourth term for President Roosevelt.

PANZERS TIED UP AS U. S. ARMOR RACES ON: LANZA

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

[Regular contributor to the Field Artillery Journal and recognized as an authority on military matters.]

What happened in France was that the American 1st army broke thru the German front at Avranches on Aug. 1. Avranches is at the west base of the Cherbourg, or Cotentin, peninsula. Thru the gap thus made, American armored troops rushed.

Fanning out, some American forces advanced 100 miles across the Brittany peninsula to Brest. Others went 90 to 100 miles southwest and south toward Lorient and Nantes. But the greater part circled around the left of the German line and headed for Paris. At date of writing they had made considerable progress in this direction and were still going strong.

Still Around Avranches.

The main body of the American 1st army is still around Avranches. It is engaged in holding a road open by which supplies can be sent forward to the armored forces, who are now far away. There is just one road thru Avranches.

Twenty miles to the east is another road thru Vire and Mortain. This should be most useful. The Germans tried hard to go all the way to Avranches and cut that road too. This effort failed.

On the left of the Americans are the British 2d army and the Canadian 1st army, both of which are engaged in frontal assaults involving hard fighting. The German line has been pushed back, but so far has not been broken.

The important factor is the American armored forces now well in the German rear areas. They seem to be far from support of ground troops. They have air support. The German radio says that supplies and replacements are being dropped for them.

The planes, except when clouds are low, can warp the armored troops of impending danger. They scout in advance, report where the enemy is, and give the armored force the option of attacking, going around, or proceeding elsewhere. If the tanks decide to attack, the air force aids them.

What Will Panzers Do?

Two can play at this game. It is a very interesting feature of modern warfare. Such tactics never occurred in other wars. The Germans have considerable armor in France. The panzer divisions are good. How they propose to handle the present situation has not yet become known.

To keep the German panzers from interfering with the American armored troops is a prime objective of the attacks by the British and Canadians. They force the Germans to keep important numbers of troops opposite them who would otherwise be available to try to head off, or worse, yet encircle the Americans.

It is certain that the Germans would like to cut off, encircle and destroy the American armor.

Italy, meanwhile, continues to be a secondary theater of operations.

The Germans desire to keep the allies from reaching the plain of the Po before winter. They are engaged in a solely defensive warfare. For the allies it would be of considerable strategical advantage if the Po valley could be reached at an early date.

Opens Way for Invasion.

If this could be accomplished, south France could be invaded from the Italian side, in addition to being open to an amphibious expedition landing on the south shore. It is doubtful if the Germans could withstand such a double attack. Present indications are that they could not and would be forced out of not only south France, but thereafter all of the rest of France except the northeast corner.

It seems certain that the Germans will fight hard to prevent the allies from moving north up the Italian peninsula. The Germans' main line, as reported in this column a full year ago, is across the north part of Tuscany. It has recently been named the Gothic line. It is only some 20 miles back of the Germans now along the Arno river.

To reach the Po valley, the allies must gain 50 miles. The intervening territory is rough and difficult. It is nevertheless an important goal for the allies.

Gothic Line Strengthened.

The Germans are reported to have done considerable work fortifying the Gothic line. Because of the mountains, tanks can be used to a limited extent only. The opening of a gap for tanks to dash around in the enemy's rear has been accomplished in open country by both sides in Russia and by the Americans in Normandy.

Present indications are that the allies will continue to fight a succession of battles, likely to be hard ones, to make that last 50 miles.

SOLDIER IS SUED FOR DIVORCE BY MRS. O. E. BABCOCK

Mrs. Elizabeth Alexander Babcock, daughter of the late James G. Alexander of Lake Forest, socially prominent Chicago financier, and of Mrs. Hugh N. O'Neil of Lake Forest, has filed suit for divorce in West Palm Beach, Fla., against Pvt. Orville Elias Babcock, it was learned here yesterday.

The complaint, filed Aug. 1, charged mental cruelty. The Babcocks are parents of two sons, aged 7 and 4.

Babcock, who is stationed at Scott Field, near Belleville, Saint Clair county, is an employe of the classified advertising department of The Tribune on leave with the army.

NEW DRAKE CASE THEORY TOLD TO CAPT. HARRISON

Mrs. Goodbody Target of Killer, Wilson Says.

As Wilson reconstructs the scene, Mrs. Williams and the unknown assassin struggled in the hall for possession of the gun. Mrs. Williams was forced back northward into the bedroom to a point 13 feet from the point in the hall where they met. At least it is 13 feet from where Mrs. Williams finally fell, mortally wounded, from the hall closet door where the No. 2 shot was fired.

Director Wilson gave considerable study to the No. 3 bullet; evidence was ample. The evidence showed that it was a wild shot. It drilled thru a north bedroom window of room 836 in a north-northwest direction, at a point 57½ inches above the floor. It crossed 38 feet of open hotel courtway, and penetrated a window screen in room 830 at a point 41 inches above the floor of room 830.

Measurements Connected.

Connecting these measurements, on scale drawings, Wilson worked backward from the window screen hole in room 830 thru the window hole in room 836, and established that this bullet, if fired from the spot near where Mrs. Williams fell 12 feet inside the window, was fired at a height of 64 inches above the floor of her room.

Here again, Wilson said, was a wild shot, or one fired while the assassin was struggling with Mrs. Williams. To prove this point, Wilson examined the powder marks. They were numerous on the unfortunate Mrs. Williams. He found powder particles on her lips, her eyelids, her nose, under her chin, on her upper chest, and in a particularly dense pattern on the outside edge of her left hand and little finger between the wrist bone and the first joint of her little finger.

In addition, Wilson found a gash or a cut in the cord of tendons connecting the thumb and forefinger of the left hand.

In Struggle for Gun.

All this told gave the picture to the crime detection laboratory director:

Mrs. Williams and the assailant are struggling for possession of the gun. Mrs. Williams has seized the barrel of the gun between the index finger and thumb of her left hand. The other woman turns the gun upside down, and is able to do this because she is holding it by the grip and therefore has the advantage; but Mrs. Williams still has her left hand around it.

The gun is hammerless and smooth, except for the front sight atop the muzzle of the barrel; it is thin and sharp — and loose. Being loose, this sight presents a projection capable of causing cuts or lacerations.

During the desperate struggle, the killer pulls the gun toward herself. The loose sight pinches or cuts the outer part of the tendon between the thumb and index finger of Mrs. Williams' left hand. It is probably pushed back and forth several times.

Gun, Upside Down, Fired.

Then the revolver, which Mrs. Williams still held by the barrel, and which the assassin held by the stock, is fired. The gun is still in an upside down position.

The burst of powder and gas from the muzzle misses Mrs. Williams' hand because the muzzle is now protruding slightly beyond her hand, but when this shot is fired powder particles are thrown from its two sides. [As in the case of Patricia, already described.]

Flakes of powder, particles of lead, and gas from the sidefire strike Mrs. Williams on the lips, under the chin, on the neck, and in the region of the upper chest. The same flash also strikes the edge of Mrs. Williams' left hand.

Shot Goes Thru Window.

It is unquestionably a wild shot. It is fired 64 inches above the floor, in the vicinity of Mrs. Williams' left shoulder. It crashes thru the north window of room 836, crosses the courtyard, and penetrates the screen of room 830.

It is the prelude to murder, for the sidefire from this shot, as noted before, sears Mrs. Williams' left hand. The injury is extremely painful and Mrs. Williams is forced to release her hold on the revolver.

The assassin then swings the gun around and at close range fires the fourth and fatal shot. The bullet enters Mrs. Williams' upper forehead above the eyes. The path of the bullet is slightly upward—not downward as previously believed. It traveled five inches to the back of head, following the skull inside.

Powder Burns Give Proof.

The proof of all this? The telltale powder burns again. These marks are found on the upper face, the eyes, and the nose. The bullet that made those marks could not have made the marks under Mrs. Williams' chin, on her upper left chest, on the edge of her left hand. Nor could the bullet that made these several marks have caused the marks on the upper face, eyes, and nose.

Director Wilson established that both women were standing when the fatal shot was fired. A few drops of blood on the foot of the bedspread near which Mrs. Williams fell tell the story. These drops were tear-shaped. When a drop of blood falls from a wounded person who is in motion, the drop assumes that shape. When blood drops straight down from a wounded person not in motion, the drops are circular when they strike the floor. The drops on the bedspread were tear-shaped, indicating movement of the injured person.

Wilson has examined the Williams murder gun as he has examined few other weapons. Its serial number is D-37449. It is 34 years old. Its chambers hold five .38 S. & W. revolver cartridges. On Jan. 19 it contained only four loaded cartridges. The fifth chamber was empty. Oil and dust in the empty chamber indicated it had long been empty. The four other chambers held residues of recently fired shots.

Lack of 5th Bullet Intriguing.

Absence of a fifth bullet intrigued Wilson. It suggests, he said, that one of its previous owners, and perhaps the last one to load it, was accustomed to guns. Before the modern safe guns became common, he said, it was the habit of some elderly gun owners, including policemen, guards, and watchmen, to keep empty the chamber aligned with the barrel and under the hammer to avoid accidental discharge in case the gun was dropped.

Three of the fired bullets and cartridges recovered were manufactured by the Remington Arms company; the fourth was manufactured by the Western Cartridge company. Wilson was able to establish that the first shot fired was a Remington, the second the Western, and the third and fourth Remington. The Western was copper coated; the others were plain lead. All the cartridges were probably 20 to 25 years old.

Wilson said that the murder gun was not only old, but badly kept. Once it had been clumsily taken apart by some one with little knowledge of guns. It had also been used as a hammer, as evidenced by numerous nicks. The sides had been rubbed with a fine abrasive paper or cloth, leaving many fine scratches on the surface of gun.

Blue Finish Worn Off.

"Also, the blue finish on both sides of the muzzle tip of the barrel had been worn off," said Wilson. "A polished steel surface of the barrel was revealed. This wearing off could have occurred as the result of the gun's having been carried for some period of time in a holster." The weapon was not of the type or caliber that police use. Guards and watchmen, however, often use this type.

Wilson also disclosed two other details about the murder gun, both of which convince him that a woman had it in her possession, and one of which still remains as a potential clew to the slayer.

"There was a distinct aroma of perfume on that gun for four or five days after the shooting," Wilson said. "However, the aroma was blended with the odor of gunpowder. Many women tried to help us identify the perfume, but the aroma was not sufficiently strong, nor clear against the odor of the powder, to permit them to identify the particular scent.

Proof of a Third Woman.

"But that trace of perfume proves a feminine hand was involved somewhere close to the gun. The aroma was not the kind or scent of perfume used by either Mrs. Williams or Mrs. Goodbody. Thus we are satisfied that a third woman had that gun in her possession."

The second detail is equally intriguing. From the tiny slot of a screw on the left hand side of the gun, M. E. O'Neill, the laboratory's micro-analyst, extracted a flake of enamel or lacquer—a mere speck no larger than a pin point. It was chemically analyzed.

It was found to have been chipped from a woman's lipstick container or powder compact!

"This suggests," said Wilson, "that the gun was carried in a purse, along with a lipstick or compact. Add that to the perfume aroma, probably derived from perfume or perfumed articles in the purse, and you definitely have a woman, and a third woman, in the case."

It is Wilson's opinion that the killer stealthily entered room 836 after Mrs. Williams and Patricia had entered the room. That the door was already unlocked when mother and daughter entered does not necessarily mean that the killer was already inside; Mrs. Williams often before had left her hotel rooms unlocked. Wilson feels that if the gunwoman had been hiding behind the bathroom door she would have been discovered earlier.

Real Target—Patricia.

He believes that the gunwoman stole into room 836, turned quietly into the bathroom, and opened fire on Patricia.

From the facts and conclusions already stated, as well as from other information which he has in his possession, Director Wilson of Chicago's famed crime detection laboratory believes—

That Patricia, not her mother, was the real murder target!

[Tomorrow Capt. Harrison will tell of prowler and other theories, and summarize his thrilling report on "The Drake Murder Case."]

Gun Examination and Diagrams Help Experts Reconstruct Murder in the Drake

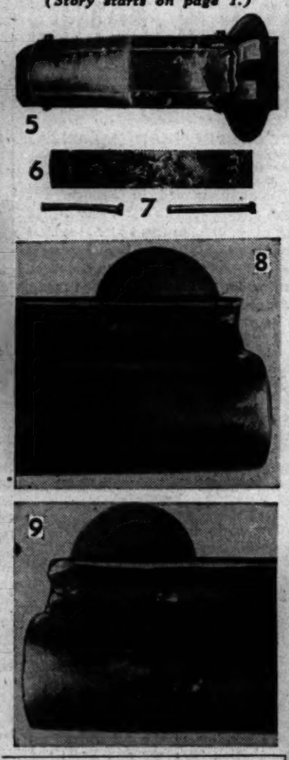
These photographs of gun used by slayer of Mrs. Adele Born Williams are explained in the material provided by Director Wilson of Chicago police crime laboratory as follows:

1: Right side of revolver.
2: Left side of revolver.
3 and 4: Abrasive marks on both sides of frame in the vicinity of cap or hammer slot housing cover pins. Nicks and abrasions shown acquired prior to shooting.
5: Top surface of the cap or hammer slot housing cover.
6: Under side of cap or hammer slot housing cover showing nicks made in disassembly of weapon prior to time used in shooting.
7: Cap or hammer slot housing cover pins. Original factory pins were missing and the pins shown in photograph 7, as recovered by the Chicago police department, were improvised from finishing nails.
8: Right side of muzzle. Light area at side of muzzle is where blue steel finish was polished off, probably as a result of weapon being carried in holster.
9: Left side of muzzle.



This weapon is an Iver Johnson .38 caliber five-shot hammerless break-open revolver having a blue steel finish and a barrel length of 3½ inches. Serial No. D-37449. This revolver is chambered for center fire revolver cartridges of the .38 S. & W. type [as distinguished from the more powerful .38 Special Police service weapon type of cartridge]. The gun was manufactured by the Iver Johnson Arms & Cycle works, Fitchburg, Mass., in 1910, and originally sold subsequent to that date.

Manufacturer's catalog description of this weapon:

"Iver Johnson five-shot safety hammerless automatic revolver .38 caliber with regular rubber grips. Catalog No. 425, serial No. D-37449."

Laboratory examination of this weapon reveals the following:

1. Front sight was loose.

2. Right and left sides of the barrel in the vicinity of the muzzle had the blue steel finish worn off. This suggests the gun had been carried for some period of time in a holster in someone's pocket. The holster was shorter than the barrel, permitting the muzzle to protrude into the pocket.

The gun had been taken apart and had had work done on it by an inexperienced mechanic who was not a gunsmith. The bluing had been removed as shown in photographs 3 and 4 by the use of a rather fine abrasive [emery paper or cloth]. In addition the sides of the frame in the vicinity of the pins shown in photographs 3 and 4 had been nicked with two types of tools: [1] A semi-circular punch, and [2], a tool whose shape was comparable to a cold chisel or screw driver. In photograph 5, attempts had been made to pry the cap or hammer slot housing cover plate out, thus nicking the forward end of that part. The gun had been used to strike some hard, sharp edged object when cap or hammer slot cover was removed. See nicks in frame, photograph 5, at cap or hammer slot cover edge. The under side of this plate is shown in photograph 6 on the under surface of which are some 20 nicks. This suggests that an attempt had been made to remove the plate by means of a tool similar in shape to a screw driver, and this tool was used in an attempt to drive the plate out of the frame from below. The metal around the pin holes in this plate had been fractured and broken, probably as a result of this inexperienced attempt to remove the plate. The two pins which hold this plate in place had been removed and the finishing nails shown in photograph 7 had been substituted for the original pins. The left side of the rib on top of the barrel is barely nicked and scored below the sight and near the muzzle, suggesting the gun had been dropped or thrown against a rough, hard, abrasive surface. Specks of rust on this fresh surface suggest this is not the result of having been thrown in hotel stairway when abandoned.

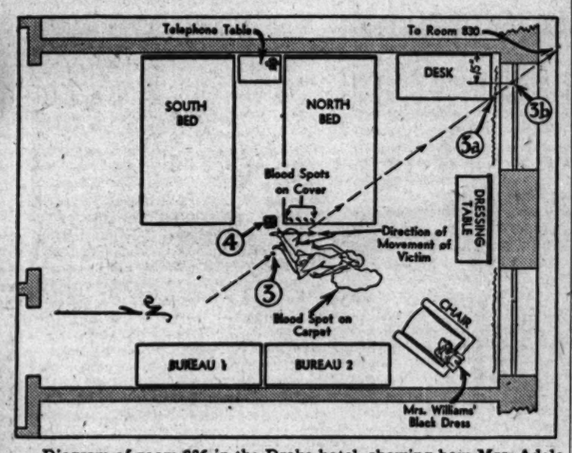


Diagram of room 836 in the Drake hotel, showing how Mrs. Adele Born Williams was killed. It deals with the firing of the third and fourth shots. Figure 3 shows point from which shot No. 3 was fired as Mrs. Williams struggled with gunwoman; 3a shows where this wild shot went thru window curtain; 3b shows where it went out thru window to strike screen of another room some distance away. Figure 4 marks spot where Mrs. Williams stood when fourth and fatal shot was fired. The sketch of woman on the floor indicates position in which she was found by Room Service Waiter Shawke, believed to be first outsider to enter room, and arrows indicate how she fell after being fatally wounded, spilling blood on bed.

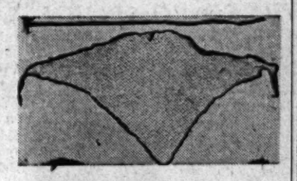
Picture of posed hand, representing Mrs. Williams' left hand, and killer's Iver Johnson revolver in the upside down position it was in during struggle when No. 3 shot, the wild one, was fired. Note relationship of gap at forward end of the cylinder to the side of hand and little finger.

Drawing of Mrs. Williams' left hand. Note laceration between thumb and index finger made by loose sight on gun. Also note heavy localized deposit of powder residues along little finger and edge of hand.

Drawing showing location of powder burns and bullet hole (arrow) on body of Mrs. Williams.



Triangular silk hair net and ribbon worn by Mrs. Patricia Goodbody when Drake hotel murderess missed her and then killed Mrs. Williams Jan. 19. The hair net was subjected to chemical tests by police department's scientific crime detection laboratory.

PUSH 20 MILES ON INTO BURMA FROM MYITKYINA

Allies Advance on Link to Ledo Road.

SOUTHEAST ASIA HDQ., KANDY, Ceylon, Aug. 13 (AP).—Burmese and Chinese troops pushing deeper into Burma from the captured Japanese base at Myitkyina toward Bhamo in North Burma have occupied the village of Kazu, 20 miles south of Myitkyina, a bulletin announced today.

Bhamo is 80 miles south of Myitkyina and 90 miles southwest of Lungling, Burma road town under attack by Chinese troops from China. It is a possible objective to link the Ledo and Burma roads.

Japs Offer Opposition.

Other allied troops moving eastward toward the Chindwin river along the Tamu-Sittaung road from India were reported meeting some Japanese opposition as they continued to drive southeast from Imphal.

The bulletin said the task of mopping up straggling Japanese forces in the Hengtam area, just north of the Burma frontier and south of Imphal, was progressing satisfactorily.

Fight to Retake Hengyang.

CHUNGKING, China, Aug. 13 (AP).—The Chinese high command indicated today that Chinese forces are making a serious bid to recapture Hengyang from the Japanese.

A bulletin said the tempo of the fighting around the battered Canton-Hankow railroad city had increased. To the north and west fierce fighting occurred at points three to six miles from the city and both sides were suffering heavy casualties.

Battle 7 Miles Away.

The Chinese said a portion of an enemy force had been eliminated 10 miles southeast of the city.

To the south fighting raged about seven miles from Hengyang.

Seventy-five miles northeast of Hengyang the bulletin said Chinese forces were pressing against Lyling, Japanese base in Hunan province.

TRUCKING FIRMS SEIZED BY U. S. OPERATE TODAY

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 13 (AP).—Lou Hosking, executive secretary of the Midwest Operators association, tonight informed Ellis T. Longenecker, federal manager of 103 midwestern over-the-road truck lines seized by the government Saturday, that members had voted unanimously to resume operations Monday under government control.

The decision came after a day long meeting of the operators from which all except the membership and ODT officials were barred. Representatives and owners of lines operating in 15 states attended the conference, including 28 independent operators, whose lines will not be affected by today's decision, according to Longenecker.

Acceptance of government operation means that operators have agreed to pay wage increases voted the drivers last February by the WLB.

Basic scale for drivers had been 90 cents per hour or 3.4 cents per mile, which ever was larger. Under the new rates, pay will be 96 cents an hour, or 3.7 cents per mile, with the larger being paid. Average weekly wage which has been from $53 to $55 will rise approximately $4, it was estimated.

BABY GIRL LEFT IN PHONE BOOTH; MOTHER SEIZED

Mrs. Mary Otlewis.

Mrs. Mary Otlewis, 24, of 6500 Harvard av., a soldier's wife who forgot her 16 months old baby, Barbara, in a tavern at 1205 E. 63d st., early yesterday, was held by Woodlawn police last night. She was arrested after the baby was discovered in a phone booth in the tavern.

Also held is Bert Jelsema, 54, of 5139 Ellis av., with whom Mrs. Otlewis had been drinking.

Jelsema told police Mrs. Otlewis left the tavern without the baby at 1 a. m. yesterday. He remained until 3 a. m., he said, waiting for her to return, after which he gave the baby to a woman who told him her name was Mrs. Alex Martin.

Shortly after noon yesterday, a woman was seen entering the tavern with a baby. It was found in the phone booth soon afterward. Police placed the infant in St. Vincent's orphanage. Mrs. Otlewis' husband is in France.

YANK BOMBERS SINK JAP SHIP OFF PHILIPPINES

GENERAL HDQ., Southwest Pacific, Aug. 14 [Monday]—(AP).—Bombers from New Guinea sank a 3,000-ton Japanese freighter in Davao gulf near Mindanao in the Philippines, headquarters announced today.

Night bombers also smashed two more enemy freighters near Halmahera Island Friday night.

Liberators and Mitchells, fighter planes and patrol torpedo boats pounded the Vogelkop coast of New Guinea. Babo strip on the southwestern coast was hit with 27 tons of bombs.

A spokesman disclosed that the Aitape campaign in New Guinea has cost the allies 285 killed, 23 missing, and 999 wounded. Most of the casualties were American.

Fire 4 Transit Employes for Disobeying U. S. Order

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 13 (AP).—Four employes of the Philadelphia Transportation company were discharged today for failure to obey the army's order to return to work last Monday when service was resumed over the lines after a six-day strike. The four discharged are Thomas A. Quigley, operator; Louis Conaway, mechanic; Pat Inverso, a maintenance man, and Charles Kluge, operator.

GUAM CB UNIT LED BY CHICAGO HEIGHTS OFFICER

GUAM [Delayed] (AP).—The ever versatile Seabees hit the beach with the marines this time. A construction battalion maintenance unit landed within a few hours of the first assault waves on Guam despite intense enemy action.

The maintenance unit was landed to unload ammunition and supplies across the 300 yard reef south of Agat on Guam, to set up shore dumps and to move equipment. They did more than that. They moved the supplies all right but found a multitude of small construction chores thruout the beachhead. They are still occupied on them.

They landed in three units, one under Lt. William R. Hildeman, civil engineer corps, U. S. N. R., of 1309 Schilling av., Chicago Heights, Ill.

TWO CHICAGOANS TELL HOW PALS DIED IN GUINEA

Back in Village, Find 5 Yank, 38 Jap Dead.

BY ARTHUR VEYSEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH U. S. FORCES IN NEW GUINEA, Aug. 12 [Delayed]. — An American patrol today slogged thru mud and sand into Yakamul, a native village on the New Guinea coast three miles east of the Driniumor river, along whose banks more than 8,000 Japanese have been killed.

Herbert Gloeckle.

On the beach at Yakamul were the bodies of five American soldiers who died there in a skirmish more than two months ago.

Near by were the bodies of 38 Japanese. Clutched in the fingers of one was the stub of an American cigar he had smoked with his dying breath.

Soldiers who had been the buddies of the five dead Americans told the story of the fight in which the five men died. Among the narrators were two Chicagoans, Sgt. Herbert Gloeckle, 2524 N. Central Park av., and Pvt. Thomas Haugh, 4011 W. Harrison st., former Bismarck hotel bellhop.

"They came out shouting 'Yank, you die,'" the men said, "and we just shouted back: 'We will be in Tokyo a hell of a long time before you.'"

Battle Lasts for Days.

The fight began June 1. For three days the Japs pecked at the defenses set up around Yakamul by its garrison of 40. On June 4 the Japs cut the telephone lines running west on the beach to the main outposts along the Driniumor. Corp. Gersen Fetter, 2744 N. 24th st., Milwaukee, Wis., took a dozen men to repair one line while another force traced the second wire.

Half a mile out both patrols were ambushed. Fetter lost one man killed.

At dusk the Japs struck. A small stream runs thru the village and the Japs concentrated on the eastern flank.

Death Trap at River Bank.

At midnight Sgt. Conroy decided his men could hold out no longer and decided to cross the stream to join the others. But the Japs had set up a machine gun and it was found that a crossing would be suicide. Across the stream the commanding lieutenant called in his first sergeant and four volunteers and made a flank attack on the gun.

The gunner fired and the lieutenant and the sergeant were killed, but this diversion enabled Conroy's men to cross.

Two men stripped off their clothes, waded into the surf and swam upcoast. When they had passed the Jap positions on the beach they came ashore and ran up the sand three miles to a river outpost.

An amphibious jeep and a gunboat started to Yakamul. A small airplane flew low overhead.

One Man Drowns Two.

The jeep and the gunboat arrived at dawn. As the men waded out to climb aboard the jeep, the Japs chased them into the water. Two of them came after one American. He struck one on the head with his rifle, then grabbed both around the necks and held their heads under water until they were dead.

The jeep pulled out. Four men stayed in a hole at the water's edge to cover the boarding and were left stranded on the beach. The plane dropped them lifejackets and they swam out to the gunboat.

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by Mrs. Lloyd Van Sande, Prairie View, Lake county.]

THE QUESTION.

What is your opinion of your wife's driving?

WHERE ASKED.

Oriental theater [asked of Stan Kenton and his orchestra].

THE ANSWERS.

Stan Kenton, Los Angeles, Cal.—When I'm driving at a reasonable rate of speed my wife always tells me to slow down. The minute I give her the wheel she steps on the gas and drives like a maniac. She scares me speechless. I never criticize her driving because I have the utmost confidence in her ability.

Gene Howard, Croydon hotel—I hate to admit it, but my wife is a better driver than I. She's had a car since she's been able to drive and has gotten a lot of practical experience. That's more than I can say for myself. She's a sensible driver, and it's unusual for a woman to be as good as she is.

John Bock, 708 W. 117th pl.—She's run over several curb stones and given a few pedestrians a good scare, but that's about the extent of her driving career. I've never had the patience to stay with the project long enough to teach her so that I'd trust her to drive alone. I guess she'll never be any good at it.

Dick Morse, Los Angeles, Cal.—All I can say is she gets along. She's such a tiny little lady that she has a hard time seeing where she's going. She looks between the steering wheel and the bottom of the windshield and nearly slips off the seat when she has to use the break or clutch.

Karl George, 2716 Council st., Los Angeles, Cal.—My wife has a Los Angeles driver's license and I think that's a tough town to drive in. She's never had an accident or even bumped a fender. What's more, she's never gotten a ticket, and I've had two or three. She's better in the city than on a highway.

Robert Kesterson, 1401 N. Ridgewood pl., Hollywood, Cal.—Well, I'm willing to ride with her rather than walk if she insists on driving. She drives reasonably dangerously, but I guess she's just had more than her share of luck. I don't believe she's ever had an accident.

6 GUAM YANKS ENTER JAP AREA; BRING BACK 20

BY HAROLD SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GUAM, Aug. 6 [Delayed]. — Six fighting men went out on an errand of mercy Friday and yesterday came back with seven prisoners of war, eight women, including a pretty girl, six children, five of them babies, and two native men.

The party, headed by Ph. Mate 3d Class Fred P. Johansen of Toppenish, Wash., set out from the Agat field hospital Friday to rescue five wounded natives near the central part of the island. In the party were Ph. Mate 2d Class William E. Norman of Bloomington, Ind.; Pvt. Gotthelf Danner, Elgin, Ill.; Pvt. James Furshong, Anaconda, Mont.; Pvt. Lonsford C. Harwell, Memphis, Tenn., and Ph. Mate 3d Class Harold B. Reynolds of Sand Springs, Okla. All were marines or sailors assigned to the corps.

Setting out in three jeeps, the party encountered a native farmer, Antonio Camacho, on a trail one mile north of Mount Alifan. Tony guided the group to the command post, where it was learned the marines had evacuated the five patients earlier.

"Only Five Miles."

But Tony knew where other friendly folk were in trouble, so the frustrated rescuers accepted his guidance for his estimated five mile trip. They had hardly started when the jeeps stalled in a creek ford. Norman and Harwell returned for help with the jeeps. The other five pressed on toward Talofofo.

Tony's five miles lengthened into five hours, and still he insisted they would be there any minute. The anxiety was not lessened by enemy snipers near Talofofo, who pinned down the party a few minutes before the arrival at Tony's home in Talofofo.

The marines and sailors got acquainted with Tony's wife and two children, Mary Wolford, 28 years old, half-caste daughter of an American chief pharmacist's mate, and Mary's mother. Tho the enemy occupied the territory, it was agreed they would spend the night there, so Mary and her mother, who were caring for Tony's wife, an expectant mother, prepared a meager meal built around fried rice.

Brings In Seven Japs.

In the morning Tony borrowed a carbine, disappeared for a while, and returned marching seven men before him. They were Guam born half Japanese who had collaborated with the enemy invaders during the 31 months of the Nip invasion and had harbored Jap snipers.

The return party started augmented by several of Tony's neighbors, the five younger prisoners carrying one small child apiece, while the four service men stood guard.

The Talofofo snipers again pinned down the migrants, but by mid-afternoon they reached the mired jeeps, two of which the boys managed to get started. The jeeps pushed ahead with the women and children, those on foot arriving at the hospital after dark to find the officer in charge, Lt. Comdr. William Rambo, Los Angeles, Cal., had just declared them missing in action.

NIMITZ VISITS MARSHALLS TO HONOR MITSCHER

ADVANCED BASE, Marshall Islands, Aug. 10 [Delayed]—(AP).—Adm. Chester W. Nimitz made a surprise visit to this base today and brought a surprise gift to Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher, commander of the carrier force.

It was a gold star, in lieu of a second distinguished service medal. Nimitz made the presentation at a private breakfast meeting of Vice Adm. J. H. Hoover, commander of forward areas of the central Pacific, and his party.

"Ninety-one years ago a naval officer opened up the ports of Japan," Nimitz said, "and now another officer is doing his damnedest to close them." [He referred to Commodore Matthew C. Perry, who persuaded the Japanese to open their ports to American trade.] The decoration is for Mitscher's carrier force performance in the Marshalls last January and for raids on Truk and the Mariarfas in February.

GREEN ASSAILS COSTLY, CHAOTIC NEW DEAL RULE

Vows Sane, Economical Regime Under G. O. P.

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 13 [Special].—Assailing the New Deal as a "confused and visionless administration whose only solution to chaotic social and economic conditions is more burocracy and more dictatorial regimentation of the American individual," Gov. Green of Illinois said today the "main issue in America is between centralization of government which has run amuck in its extravagances and waste, and free representative government in which economy and businesslike methods are the watchword."

Gov. Green, speaking at a statewide meeting of Republicans in Potawatomie park here in honor of Rep. Grant [R., Ind.], said the "argument for centralized government is based on the fallacy that this nation is a more efficiently operating unit when the reins of power are held entirely in executive hands. But the burocrats who conceal their usurpation behind the false face of efficiency no longer can deceive the American people.

Costly, Not Efficient.

"Such government is not efficient. The present intricate national burocracy is the most expensive and most recklessly extravagant in American history. Never before have the American people seen such inconsistency and petty bickering at the seat of their federal government."

Green asserted the "unwieldy federal burocracy is composed of millions of persons who owe their jobs and their power only to the person who appointed them. Their first loyalty is to the 'boss'—not to the people. Their first desire is for more power—not to give service."

"The most serious threat to our liberties," Green said, "is the assumption by a small group that it possesses a monopoly on wisdom, good will, and social justice — that seeks to exercise arbitrary power over the legislative and judicial departments of government by its concentration in a domineering burocracy — that challenges the motives of those who differ with it on public issues — that appeals to the prejudices of the underprivileged and the unthinking, and tries to convey the impression that it alone hates hunger and poverty, and that all who do not favor its perpetuation in power are unpatriotic exploiters and enemies of society.

The People Aroused.

"The demand for a return to constitutional government that is sweeping America springs from the people. It is greater than any man who champions it and it is stronger than any man who would stand in its way.

"Neither federal subsidy, nor patronage, nor skillful propaganda, nor the fear of reprisals from a centralized and ruthless dictatorial burocracy can stay the verdict which soon will be rendered. We [the Republicans] have the candidates who will carry the issue of a return to the Constitution squarely to the American people and we have the honest, plain-spoken platform which backs them up."

All-American Team.

Green termed Gov. Dewey and Gov. Bricker, Republican Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates, as "saviors of America" who "form an all-American team for victory, peace, unity, and prosperity."

"A strong America can help lead less fortunate people out of chaos, confusion, and misery," he asserted. "But our influence can best be asserted as an independent sovereignty, without secret entanglements and without surrendering any of our constitutional safeguards.

"The Republican party is the only agency committed to resist the impairment of our own sovereignty and the unwarranted draining and exhausting of our national resources and vitality—the only one which does not contemplate the possibility that our sons and daughters would be subject to the call of a foreign power, and that we might permit our sovereign right to declare war to pass to foreign states."

Birthday Party

Gov. Green cut himself a cake last night at "Uncle John's" birthday party at 1327 Sherwin av. and reminesced with the home folk from Ligonier, Ind.

"Uncle John" is John H. Green, who lived next door to the present governor in Ligonier, but moved to Milwaukee, Wis., a decade ago. He was 80 years old Aug. 9, and had his party yesterday in the home of the governor's sister, Mrs. Mary Shearer.

No titles were cast about at the gathering last night. Every one was Dwight, Aunt Maud, Cousin Tom, or Jake Streets' boy, or bore some like appellation. Attempts to dissuade "Uncle John" from waiting up for the governor, who was making a speech in South Bend, were futile. While he waited he proved he is second to none in his admiration for the governor.

"Win this election?" he said in wonder at such a question. "He'll never lose it. He takes after his father and brothers."

Gov. Green, it developed, was quite a quarter back at Wabash college and played considerable third base for the college. He's fit by education and qualifications to go up in the national picture, Uncle John confided.

Then Gov. Green appeared at the front door. Uncle John threw his arms around him and planted an unembarrassed kiss on his cheek.

"He keeps his word," he told the gathering. "He said he'd be here and I knew he'd come."

Green greeted his wife and daughter and began to give attention to Ligonier matters.

NOVELIST TURNS ON DEMOCRATS; OUT FOR DEWEY

Lucas, O., Aug. 13 [Special].—Comparing the New Deal to "an old rope with frayed ends that can't pull things together," Arthur-Farmer Louis Bromfield, a lifetime Democrat, said today he would vote for Gov. Dewey, Republican Presidential nominee, in the fall election.

Bromfield, Pulitzer prize novelist and author of several best sellers, made the announcement at his 900 acre farm near here, where he writes many of his novels and raises beef and dairy cattle, chickens, and sheep.

"Old and Quarrelsome."

"President Roosevelt and the New Deal have grown so old and quarrelsome that a change in administration would benefit the nation," said Bromfield, who described himself as a liberal Democrat. "We need a new, vigorous businesslike administration that Gov. Dewey has demonstrated he can provide.

"The New Deal is like an old rope frayed at the ends. It can't pull things together any more. There have been entirely too many compromises within the party and everybody's hands are tied."

Bromfield, who said he had never before voted for a Republican Presidential nominee, termed the department of agriculture "The worst example of all the faults of the administration — rivalries, jealousies, confusion, petty bickering, and lack of intelligent leadership."

Monumental Confusion.

"This is the most monumental case of confusion this, or any other country, has ever known," the author said. "The farmers are paralyzed by red tape and their attitude toward the administration is one of hostility."

He predicted "At least one-fourth of the Democrats of Ohio will oppose the President and three or four million thruout the nation will vote Republican in November."

Bromfield asserted present indications point to Dewey's election.

SOLDIER DIES IN WRECK.
Camp Pickett, Va., Aug. 13 (AP).—One soldier was killed and five others injured when a car carrying military police overturned near Blackstone, Va., last night. None was from Chicagoland.

COURTNEY CHARGES GOVERNOR IMPEDED VOTES FOR SOLDIERS

State's Atty. Courtney, Democratic candidate for governor, charged yesterday that Gov. Green's Republican administration deliberately refused to simplify the state soldiers' absentee ballot law and made it "almost impossible for service men to cast ballots." Courtney spoke at the opening of party headquarters in Glen Ellyn.

"That was just more cheap politics on the part of Green and his administration," Courtney said. "Green brought Gov. Dewey down to Springfield to advise him on what the country needs, but in my opinion he'd better look to Illinois and his own record as governor."

Other speakers were Casimir Griglik, candidate for Supreme court clerk; George D. Kells, Democratic state chairman, and Joseph Sam Perry of Wheaton, who said 250 persons were in the audience, a good sign for Du Page county.

CLOTHING STOLEN FROM AUTO.
Thieves who reached thru an open window stole a suitcase containing $150 worth of clothing from his automobile at Harrison st. and Wabash av., James Delaney of Los Angeles, Cal., told police yesterday.

SEN. LUCAS ASKS CO-OPERATION IN PAPER SALVAGE

Decatur, Ill., Aug. 13 (AP).—Sen. Lucas [D., Ill.] said today the co-operation of all citizens could overcome "America's No. 1 critical war material shortage—paper" and it was a matter of informing homeowners and every one to avoid a shortage of more than 700,000 warfare items which need paper.

In a speech in which he crowned Miss Kathryn Shields, 15, "paper queen," Lucas congratulated Decatur for giving 350 tons of paper to the drive.

He declared there might be a further curtailment of all types of paper for commercial and book printers and newspapers unless the shortage was alleviated.

DEWEY SPENDS DAY DRAFTING CAMPAIGN TALK

Pawling, N. Y., Aug. 13 (AP).—Gov. Dewey, Republican Presidential nominee, devoted a second day to speech writing in the seclusion of his Quaker hill farm home today, but the subject of his first address was a closely guarded secret.

He is expected to start a speaking campaign shortly after Labor day, but the time and place are not indicated.

Dewey took time out from dictating preliminary drafts of his speeches to play 18 holes of golf, his only activity outside his home during his week-end stay here.

The governor will return to Albany tomorrow.

Steamboat!

Shades of Mark Twain, Tom Sawyer, and Huck Finn! Is that the "Robert E. Lee" comin' round the bend? No, dear reader, it is twelve thousand tons of mixed war cargo handled by a tow of eight or ten barges. Such a tow, incidentally, is twenty-four times as great a load as the famous "Robert E. Lee" could have carried when she chugged along in her heyday, in the glamorous old days of river steamboats and showboats.

We stood on the docks at Lawrenceburg, Indiana, where one of Schenley's principal distilleries is located—on the Ohio. The Ohio, an important inland waterway, is a prime factor in speeding the flow of essential war alcohol to the synthetic rubber and explosive plants. And other important distilleries situated principally in sections of Kentucky, Indiana, and Pennsylvania are close to the waterways which are making history again. Great fleets of modern riverboats are smashing bottlenecks in vital wartime transportation

There they go, these steamboats, downstream over the busy liquid highways, carrying, besides, coal, coke, finished steel, grain, flour, machinery—from Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Cincinnati, and Minneapolis. From Wisconsin, Michigan, Illinois, and Indiana come minelayers, destroyer escorts, patrol vessels, landing craft, hard-hitting PT boats. Down the Ohio and Illinois rivers they go into the Father of Waters and out to sea and action. The Ohio, Illinois, Monongahela, Allegheny, Kanawha, and Tennessee rivers reach into areas rich in natural resources. Industrial centers such as Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago, Louisville, Minneapolis, St. Louis, and New Orleans are all linked by these precious waterways which have taken much of the transportation load from the ever-whirring and overburdened wheels of our railroads and trucks.

What a thrill to this landlubber who stood and watched the river activity at its all-time high! We were thinking of VICTORY, while we hummed that beloved, "...he jes keeps rollin' along."

Even Before the War, the PHILCO REFRIGERATOR Gave You this Advanced Design!

A full size, separate Compartment for FROZEN STORAGE IN ADDITION TO THE REGULAR ICE CUBE CHAMBER

Today owners of Philco Refrigerators have good reason to congratulate themselves on their choice. For before the war, Philco introduced an entirely new kind of refrigerator with a full size, separate compartment for Frozen Storage where foods of all kinds can be kept at below freezing temperatures for weeks. Think what that means in these days of food rationing and restricted shopping trips. And remember, it's an exclusive feature, only one example of the Advanced Design that Philco has brought to refrigeration.

Tomorrow under the influence of Philco Advanced Design, the refrigerator will be tremendously more useful and convenient in your home. New ideas are waiting for development when Philco engineers return from their war research. Watch Philco in refrigeration after the war. You'll see new evidence of the engineering progress that has made the Philco name stand for Leadership over the years!

NUISANCE VALUES.

In the past possession of Arctic land has had little value beyond that of national prestige. Cold and ice made deserts in which a few nomad tribes struggled for a miserable living. With the development of long range aviation this land develops a nuisance value. The possessor has the legal right to exclude airplanes of other nations from flying over it.

We are beginning to learn thru the influence of the airplane to replace for many purposes our old conception of a world divided into eastern and western hemisphere with one of a world divided at the line of the equator. Because the bulk of the world's land lies in the northern hemisphere, it is the northern polar waste that concerns us. Air rights across Antarctica are and will be of trivial value, but the map on the back page shows the nuisance value of the north polar lands in the development of international air traffic.

Because of their title to these hitherto worthless wastes, countries far inferior to the United States in all of the factors necessary to the development of international air traffic—industrial capacity, operating experience, and population sufficient to furnish a profitable air traffic volume—are in a position to stymie American operation of air routes to other nations.

We are beginning to learn that seaports lose their value as terminals for vehicles capable of passing over land or water indifferently. Such ports as New York, Baltimore, San Francisco will, as airports, be of importance only because of the concentrations of population in their immediate neighborhood. Chicago, close to the center of population of the nation, can become the air traffic center of the United States, as it became the railroad center, if it throws off its present lethargy and builds adequate airports.

But planes taking off from Chicago—or from Atlantic or Pacific coast points, for that matter—cannot follow the most direct great circle routes to other centers of population without traversing one or more of these lands with newly won nuisance values. Canada has tremendous nuisance value as a barrier to American air transport, not only its barren arctic wastes but the settled areas north of the border. Direct routes from the United States to every capital of importance in the northern hemisphere must cross Canadian soil.

Greenland blocks traffic to Moscow and northern Europe. Farther away settled lands impose other barriers. Ireland is an obstacle to the most direct routes to England, the British Isles stand between us and most of western Europe, and Norway across the path to the rest of Scandinavia and Russia.

These barrier lands are totally dissimilar to Hawaii, our greatest asset in Pacific air transportation. They block paths. Hawaii is a stepping stone. At present, and probably for years to come, no plane can cross the Pacific except thru the Hawaiian gateway. It is thus our best bargaining material in seeking air rights elsewhere.

Forty years ago the law schools of the country taught that title to land extended from the center of the earth to the limits of heaven. With the arrival of aviation, courts extinguished these air rights of the individual property owner, and states and municipalities even forbade property owners near airports to use their own land to erect buildings or other tall structures that might be hazardous to air navigation.

This legal reform has not, however, been carried from the domestic to the international field. Nations still retain the air rights over their own territory, and unless we get treaties modifying those rights before the end of the war, nuisance values can be used against us to our great detriment. Without such treaties, should we try to develop the air transportation system necessary to our national existence, we would come under the phrase, "aggressor nations" so inauspiciously created by Mr. Hull.

The time to negotiate these treaties is now, while Canada and other nations are still receiving our tremendous lend-lease aid, which among other things has been used to develop the airports and other facilities from which we will be barred after the war, thru the negligence and colonial subservience of the present administration.

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW.

People who should have been liquidated by gasoline rationing or something else, but weren't:

The driver on a four lane highway who uses one of the lane stripes as a slot for his radiator cap.

The war or office worker driving home on the Outer drive in the rush hour, who stops on the drive and opens all doors to let his pals out, thereby piling up traffic in all four lanes.

The army officer, 4,000 miles from the urgency of a battle front, who whips in and out of traffic at 55 miles an hour in his private car, a babe or two in the front seat, trusting his uniform to protect him from the cops.

The service forces G. I., also 4,000 miles from the fighting, who herds an empty army van along the Outer drive at 60, just to see if the crate will go that fast.

The bathers at Oak st., North av., and points north, too lazy to use the pedestrian underpasses, who try to dash across the drive in rush hour traffic, causing smashups and jams, and missing death by inches.

WHY THE AMMUNITION RAN OUT.

When American forces landed on Guam last month, they rescued a naval radioman, George Ray Tweed, who for more than two and a half years had been a fugitive from death, hiding in a remote cave. Four of his companions who escaped after the surrender were hunted down and killed by the Japs.

Tweed gave the first eyewitness account of the gallant but futile defense of Agana, the capital of Guam, by the 300 marines and sailors who were stationed there. "We had so few guns, so little ammunition," he said, "there was little we could do to defend." Nevertheless, the marines on Cabras Island actually repulsed the Jap assault until they had fired their last shot. The rest of the defenders, he said, fought bitterly from street to street and house to house in Agana until they were all killed or captured.

The apologists for Roosevelt's bungling as commander in chief have sought to fasten on the Republicans the failure of congress—Roosevelt's Democratic congress, of course—to fortify Guam. Their argument is pointless. After Roosevelt lost the fleet at Pearl Harbor, fortifications would no more have saved Guam than they saved Bataan and Corregidor, which was fortified. Had Guam been fortified, it would have cost just that many more American lives to retake it.

It was not any Republican in congress, however, who prevented Roosevelt from sending the handful of marines on Guam an adequate supply of machinegun ammunition, and perhaps even some howitzers and anti-aircraft guns. Roosevelt had those articles in 1941, but he wasn't interested in using them to defend the Pacific. He was shipping them to Britain under lend-lease. That was why the marines on Cabras Island repulsed the Japs—until their ammunition ran out.

IMMIGRATION POLICY.

Approximately a thousand war refugees of all creeds and half a dozen nationalities were recently landed in New York and taken to the Niagara Falls neighborhood, where they will be kept in a species of beneficent interment until such time as it is possible for them to return to their homelands.

This particular group had made their way to Italy from various Nazi occupied regions. Why it was decided to bring them to this country instead of maintaining them in Italy has not been made clear, altho it may well be that military requirements preempt eastbound transportation.

These refugees are not admitted as immigrants, but many of them, beyond doubt, would like to stay permanently in this country and pressure may be exerted to let them stay here. That must be resisted. There are millions of others in the liberated regions of Europe and there will be tens of millions more when the Nazi power is destroyed, whose most ardent wish will be to escape the poverty and turmoil of Europe for the freedom and prosperity of the United States.

The country is already gravely concerned over the problem of maintaining employment during the shift from war to peace time production. With the best efforts of which industry is capable, and a minimum of interference by government, we must still look forward to some temporary unemployment. To add to that unemployment by admitting European workers during the transition period is the obvious height of folly.

Even after our own economic equilibrium has been restored, the American people will be disinclined to depart far from the policy that has restricted immigration severely for two decades. Immigration presents not only economic, but political problems as well. Our present form of government depends upon a reasonably homogeneous population—not racially homogenous, nor a people of regimented minds, but a people with deep enough allegiance to our representative government to settle their problems within the framework of its Constitution. That we cannot have if we dilute our ranks faster than we can educate and absorb the aliens.

Immigration is a privilege, and one that will be sought eagerly by a large proportion of the European population. We have it within our power to attract to our shores the cream of Europe, but we are more likely to get its economic and political discards unless we abandon the pre-war system of numerical immigration quotas. An immigrant is applying for a lifetime job in the United States, and jobs for his children and grandchildren. We should judge him as we judge any other applicant for a job—on the basis of professional or technical skill, health, education, and experience in and adaptability to the institutions of representative government.

The problem of immigration cannot and must not be confused or mixed with the problem of European relief. There will be widespread suffering in Europe as a result of the disruption of war and the American people will want to do everything within their power to relieve it. There also will be a general lowering of standards of living as a result of war destruction, which may persist for a generation or more. That is the misfortune of the European people, a result of their own political defects, and is not anything that we are bound to relieve by permitting indiscriminate immigration injurious to our own standard of living.

CONSISTENCY.

[Peoria Morning Star.]

A Republicans-for-Lucas league has been chartered in Illinois and the argument is being advanced by this league that Republicans should vote for Sen. Lucas because he voted against packing the Supreme court and to override the veto of the latest tax measure. Richard J. Lyons would have cast the same vote on these two issues and besides he would have opposed other legislation and grants of power to burocrats against which the people have just cause for complaint. Of course, at the same time, the word will go out to Democrats that they should support Sen. Lucas because he has unfalteringly and unfailingly upheld the hands of President Roosevelt.

Reg. U. S. Pat. Office

PERSONAL.

Dear Dr. Collins: I got some information about the plot against you [first exposed in this space Aug. 8]. One of the ringleaders, you will be shocked to learn, is a man who uses the name of Irmiter. He is evidently a man you have trusted, and he still purrs about his fondness for you, calls you "saintly looking," and then resorts to the indirect attack, the rhetorical interrogative. Let me explain.

You remember I told you I had placed the confidential dossier on Silly Sally between your Portuguese dictionary and your pipe cleaners? Well, this Irmiter sends a letter saying, "Anybody nowadays may possess a Portuguese dictionary, but where did Dr. Collins get those pipe cleaners?" [The italics are his.]

* * *

Growing bolder, he plainly intimates that in his opinion you must have obtained your cleaners in the black market. In fact, he uses more italics to suggest that you may have used your "influence and prestige," first to find out where such a market exists and then to obtain shopping privileges in it. He is surely out to get you.

Now if his motive in this attack were the motive of a noble citizen, ready to sacrifice an old friendship on the altar of duty, I suppose he could be forgiven. But his motive is not noble. Between the lines of his letter [which I am adding to the Silly Sally papers, in case you wish to consult your attorney] he is revealed as one who wants those pipe cleaners for himself—and that is why I have taken the precaution of placing them in my bank vault where, with the exception of the ones I am holding for personal use, they will be available as soon as you can get a writ of replevin.

* * *

Incidentally, I shall not let Mr. Irmiter know, unless he is the type that goes snooping thru newspapers for information, anything at all about your seven genuine rubber bands and your box [two-thirds full] of pre-war, nonrusting paper clips.

As for the way you acquired your pipe cleaners, I know it was honorable. The cleaners themselves prove it, for they are not the kind you get in any illegal market. They are not the good white ones, made on honest twisted wire, that we all enjoyed in Terms I., II., and most of III., of the present administration. They are brown, ugly looking, definitely Fourth Term.

O, my life has been filled with a number of loves,
Of romances, here and abroad;
From dancing school Pat to fraternity Nat . . .
All vanished somewhere in discard.

I went swimming with Walter, and sailing with Bill,
And dancing with Henry and Hugh;
There was communist Gene at a tender sixteen;
And an Argentine diplomat, too!

There was John in depression and Arthur in peace;
And Teddy who loved me in rhyme.
There was uniformed Jim and a crooner named Tim
(But I only loved one at a time).

But suddenly, Saturday, into my life
Came two of the handsomest yet!
And I found with a start they had stolen my heart,
And I find it so hard to forget.

For Peter's the roguish and mischievous type,
With a rat-a-tat-tat and a noise,
And Paul is a lamb in the arms of his Gram . . .
They're Harriet's wonderful boys!

CANAVALIN—A NEW GERM KILLER.

THERE are probably scores of anti-bacterial agents awaiting discovery. The spectacular role of penicillin, which is now available, has created a profound stir in the medical world. Physicians realize how little they know about the natural foes of microbes—especially such substances as enzymes, ferments and the like.

This is emphasized by the recent announcement by David Farley of Philadelphia of a new germ killer which he calls "canavalin." Ten years have been spent in investigation of this product, which is a combination of an enzyme and a coenzyme, extracted separately.

The first portion is prepared from the jack bean altho it also has been found in soybeans, liver, and white potatoes. The second element is associated with special fractions of vitamin B, chiefly thiamin and riboflavin. When blended, these two solutions, which occur normally in the circulation of human beings, represent a strong enemy against certain types of disease producing organisms.

According to Farley, the mixture is particularly antagonistic to staphylococci and the invaders responsible for pneumonia. He cites a number of cases of pneumococcus pneumonia, many of them severe infections, which yielded promptly, even after the sulfonamides had failed. In one sufferer, canavalin was employed in combination with sulfadiazine. Within a few hours there was a sharp drop in temperature and the patient felt perfectly comfortable.

An individual with blood poisoning made a speedy convalescence. Still another, who was almost at the point of death and who had been receiving sulfadiazine without the slightest benefit, was given the drug directly into a vein and made a slow but steady recovery.

How can we explain the effect of this new compound? Apparently it acts as a powerful mobilizer of oxygen. For example, it destroys bacteria by surrounding them with so much vital gas that they suffocate. In fact, the oxidizing power of canavalin can be measured. Typhoid bacilli will be destroyed at one level and pneumonia "bugs" at another. It seems to create a condition within the body which will prevent a large number of germs from growing, propagating, and generating their toxins.

While we must look upon this initial report with some reserve, the results are too important to be ignored. The remedy is not difficult to manufacture and further investigation with this and other similar preparations may add substantially to the weapons which can be utilized against disease.

Since the days of Pasteur, who proved the bacterial foundation of certain maladies, research workers the world over have spent lifetimes in developing antitoxins against various infections. It is a wonderful field for the true scientist.

LOW SUGAR.

K. O. writes: Is a blood sugar level which is half what it should be a serious matter?

REPLY.

Low blood sugar is an indication that metabolism is substandard. Energy will be lacking. If a tendency to diabetes is not present, glucose may be taken at intervals.

MEASLES.

A. J. writes: If a child had measles once, will he get it again if he visits a child who is afflicted?

REPLY.

Probably not. Second attacks are extremely rare. On the other hand, there are two types. The ordinary variety does not afford protection against German measles.

STOMACH CAPACITY.

Mrs. T. writes: I am trying to reduce and would like to shrink my stomach. Will lemon juice do this?

REPLY.

I wish it would, but it won't. All heavy eaters have large gastric pouches. Stick to a program which will include small but more frequent repasts.

LIGHT ATTACK.

R. S. writes: What is nonparalytic polio?

REPLY.

When the disease does not proceed to the stage of paralysis.

THYROID AND PRESSURE.

S. W. writes: Can a goiter cause high blood pressure?

REPLY.

Not associated as cause and effect. The two conditions may exist simultaneously, however.

Front Views & Profiles

By MARCIA WINN

Calling All Rumors.

There is something innately morbid about the human mind which makes it lap up horror stories, apparently for no reason other than a chance to go cluck-cluck with a tongue which is rendered speechless by the dreadful story it soon will pass on.

Probably every war has its cycle of just such stories, all believed instantly and widely because they are so wholly incredible. Few persons hearing them ever stop the narrator with a "Who told you that?" "Where did she hear it?" "Who actually saw it?"

We're all dopes. We all fall for them. Well, the Cincinnati Enquirer nipped one of these ugly things to brisk bits the other day. It is one of the most macabre of the war time crop. The story went like this:

A sailor who had lost both arms in action was waiting in the Cincinnati Union terminal. A U. S. O. lady worker approached him and asked whether she could help him in any way, perhaps make a telephone call.

"No," the sailor replied. "My wife will be here in a few minutes. Then I'll be all right."

Just then the wife did walk in. She took one look at his empty sleeves, turned on her heel, and walked out again. A soldier who stood near by witnessed this and after some hesitation went over to the sailor to offer his help. The sailor asked him to put a call thru to his mother. "Perhaps," he added, "she'll take care of me."

The Enquirer went to work to comb the Union terminal for witnesses. The logical person would be a U. S. O. worker. No U. S. O. or Travelers Aid worker there had seen it. As one lady said, "If anything that painful had taken place here our ladies would have been so indignant they could have talked of nothing else."

But the person who would really know all about it, the Enquirer was told, would be the assistant station master in charge of the evening shift [it had happened at night]. He did not. Neither he nor any railroad employe had seen a sailor with two empty sleeves, or a soldier, or a marine.

And so at least one rumor has been put back in the realm of high powered, morbid imagination where it started. But watch out! The chances are 100 to 1 the story soon will be told in awful whispers around Chicago that a sailor who had lost both arms in action was standing in the Union station the other day . . . and so on. Aunt Mamie saw it. Or a friend of a cousin of a boy I used to go with told me. He was the soldier.

Plenty of these sweet little tales are roaming around, and only heaven knows why. The public apparently likes to believe its fellow men as miserable and mean as possible. Three come quickly to mind. One that had its heyday two years ago concerned the woman on a bus who said she didn't care if the war never ended, for her husband was making more money than ever before. The woman beside her leaped upon her, smacked her soundly, and said:

"My brother was killed at Corregidor."

A good 12 versions of this tale, all narrated by some one who saw it or almost saw it, came in the mail to this department alone.

Another was the tale of the prisoner of war who wrote his family he was being given excellent treatment, but under the postage stamp they found the words:

"They've cut out my tongue."

The most recent deals with mutiny in the navy. It's a nice little thing, too.

This story says that none of the sailors in the navy like their superior officers. That being the case, what are these brave sailors doing about it? They are disposing of their superior officers by sneaking up behind them on a dark night, always in the height of action [when a sailor has nothing else to do], and heaving them overboard.

And so it goes, with a "Really, my dear, I hear it's terrible. Why, John wrote me from the Pacific that he knew a man there who . . ."

You would think the world is too full of true horror stories right now for any one to go around making up more.

THE PAINT BRUSH STRIKERS.

Pollocksville Field, N. C., Aug. 8.—I read a story in THE TRIBUNE Aug. 3 to the effect that 75 men, members of the AFL Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers' union left their jobs in Mobile, Ala., because of a difference of 1½ inches in the width of paint brushes to be used on war jobs. I read the story to several of my fellow marines here, and what they thought couldn't be printed.

I wonder what would happen if I, together with 74 other men told our commanding officer that we didn't like our rifles because they were 1½ pounds too heavy for our satisfaction, that we wanted lighter ones, and that until we got them, the war could just wait?

Are these strikers afraid that a larger paint brush will finish the job sooner, and help end the war sooner? If I were them, I'd start painting, only fast, with big and small paint brushes, because every minute that is wasted in this war is costing some American his life.

SGT. R. E.

"INVITATION TO MURDER."

Muskegon, Mich., Aug. 6.—Your editorial, "Invitation to Murder," is the best article I have seen in any paper in years as a warning of what is just around the corner unless we wake up and think of the trend of events.

Of course, we must do more than think. We must act, and about all the average man can do is to vote for honesty, candor, patriotism, fair dealing [not New Dealing], and for men in office who will trust the people and take them into their confidence.

We have over the years survived much corruption, misleading, and disloyalty in high places, and we will doubtless survive the present crisis because we are still a young and vigorous nation, but it is distressing and discouraging to witness the present show and sham of government under which the people are now being ruled.

FRED W. RISLEY.

SWING SHIFT JIVE.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—K. K. R. recommends limiting the sound volume of home radios for the benefit of those who sleep during the day. How about those of us who sleep during the night, or try to? Some people who can sleep as long as they want the next day, and some night shift workers, when they come home any time after 1 o'clock, think because they are awake the rest of us will thoroly enjoy being waked up to listen to their loud conversations and any radio programs they happen to turn on full blast. M. K.

CIGAR STRIKER.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—We cigar smokers should organize a strike committee against these new name, [but old tobacco] high priced cigars, which the cigar makers are trying to force us to buy. I don't buy them and I will do without a cigar until they again bring one on the market at a price within the reach of the average man. R. S. W.

LEND-LEASE FOOLISHNESS.

Oak Park, Ill., Aug. 6.—I wish somebody would tell me how the war benefits from the giving of four transport planes to Ethiopia by the United States under lend-lease. This seems to me to be the kind of foolishness that discourages the sale of war bonds and creates resentment against high taxes.

OAK PARKER.

HOW THEY PLAN OUR FUTURE.

Corpus Christi, Tex., Aug. 11.—The scheming New Deal liberalists have got all our problems solved for us from the cradle to the grave. The Murray-Wagner-Dingell bill will guarantee us a federal doctor, hospitalization, and medicine. The Murray-Kilgore bill would have allowed the overworked CIO union members, headed by Sidney Hillman, a bonus for idleness, extended possibly to all workers. A bill is now before the senate, having passed the house, to throw the control of all insurance in the hands of Washington burocrats, claiming that insurance policies are interstate commerce. All insurance companies are compelled to hold in reserve sufficient funds to protect policy holders. Is there a like fund ear-marked and held to protect the federal social security policy holders? I think not.

All the citizens will need now, if these costly and radical bills are passed, is for these liberal dreamers to see that our meals are cooked, and our housework finished. Of course, nothing is being said about where the billions of dollars are coming from to support these radical New Deal measures, and just how much the total will be. Old Uncle Sam will do well to pay his back rent and indebtedness, which will be near the 300 billion dollar mark. Our wise and brave forefathers would never have tolerated such socialistic and communistic procedures. Let our America steer clear of all foreign measures that look good on paper, but are destructive when applied. E. DANIEL WILLIAMS.

WHERE THE WEATHER'S ALWAYS FINE.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 2.—I read with a great deal of disgust your editorial in last Sunday's paper entitled "Fresh from the Hills—a City Visit" because it cast reflection upon the weather of our fair city. I have on numerous occasions visited Chicago and have found the weather there too unbearably sultry to enjoy it, and I stayed no longer than my business necessitated. In case there is any room for argument, perhaps the Republicans can refresh your memory as to the "warm" reception they received. Yours for a boost for St. Louis. CAROLYN DUMMEYER.

COLLECTING FROM AN ESTATE.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—A man and his wife owed me about $850. When the man died several years ago his wife gave me notes on which monthly payments were to be made. Now the wife has died. She had paid off $200 and I hold her notes for the balance. 1. Do I stand a chance of getting my money? 2. How shall I go about collecting it? D. L.

1. Depends on the ratio between assets and liabilities in her estate.

2. File a claim in the probate proceedings and later prove it up. It probably will be advisable to place your claim in the hands of an attorney for collection.

LIBERATION WAR SPLITS ALBANIA INTO TWO CAMPS

Leader of One Appeals to Allies for Arms.

BARI, Italy, Aug. 6 [Delayed]—(AP).—The national army of liberation in Albania, now 40,000 strong, is badly in need of more arms and ammunition, Col. Bedri Spahui, head of its mission to the allies, said here today.

He asserted the army was standing alone against a foe that includes, in addition to two big nationalistic elements, one to three German divisions, the Albanian gendarmerie and a new German trained SS division.

"A little of everything" has been sent by Britain and America but nothing by Russia, he said. The most important assistance rendered has been that by allied fighter-bombers in raids against communications, supply dumps, and troop concentrations, he added.

One Faction Backs Zog.

Discussing the growth of the Partisan movement in the tiny mountain country, Col. Spahui spoke at a press conference of matters that allied military censorship in recent weeks had ruled unmentionable.

There has been an open break between the national liberation forces and the nationalistic faction under Abas Kupi, which wants King Zog back on the throne, Col. Spahui declared. This group has joined the Balli Kombetar, or collaborating elements, in working openly with the Germans, Col. Spahui added.

Albanian Partisans are compiling a list of war criminals to be tried after the war, the colonel asserted, "men directly responsible for collaboration with the enemy and whose hands are washed in blood."

Names of 10 Listed

He named 10 prominent Albanians and expressed hope that censorship would permit publication of them abroad. These were the names:

Fiquri Dine, prime minister for the quisling government; Shefket Verlaci, first prime minister after the Italian occupation and one of the country's wealthiest men; Mehdi Frasheri, member of the regency council in the present government; Kupi, Ali Klisura, Hassan Dosti, Idhot Frasheri, Shender Muco, Bari Omari, and Koca Muca, all leaders of the Balli Kombetar.

Archbishop Spellman to Visit Cassino Abbey Ruins

VATICAN CITY, Aug. 13 (AP).—Archbishop Francis J. Spellman will visit the Monte Cassino abbey, famous shrine of the Benedictine order, destroyed by allied guns and bombs, it was reliably reported today after he had another private audience with Pope Pius. It is likely that his visit is connected with plans for restoring the monastery.

DAY by DAY on the FARM by BEN MARKLAND

Aug. 13, 1944.

TO many casual observers game birds such as quail and pheasants are mere ornaments on the farm scene most of the year and targets for hunters in the fall, but to the practical farmer these and other birds have major rank in the continuous war against insects and weeds. The farmer, like his visitors from the city, enjoys the sight of a whirring covey of quail along a fencerow and the frightening burst of a cock pheasant from a brushpile, but the bob whites and the ringnecks are more important to him in his account ledgers than on his list of rural side shows.

The men on the Wheaton farm were conversing on this subject the other day, especially in regard to the chinch bugs and corn borers which are so troublesome [and costly] this season. It's their opinion that if all farmers would propagate and provide cover for quail, pheasants, and other game birds, their insect problems would be reduced.

Part of Winter Diet.

Pheasants and quail have little chance to feed on chinch bugs and corn borers during the summer months because the insects are in protected places at this time of the year, but there's little doubt that they eat borer larvae in old cornstalks in winter and chinch bugs harbored in bunch grass, weeds, and hedgerows from November thru February.

Many studies of the stomach contents of pheasant and quail prove that these birds live almost exclusively on waste grain, weeds, insects, insect eggs, and wild fruits. Troublesome grasshoppers are one of the most common articles of diet for both pheasants and quail, and studies in Georgia and Florida show that 14 per cent of the quail's diet consists of insects and insect larvae and eggs. In those states, grasshoppers and crickets formed about half of bob white's meat diet.

Aid Hay Fever Sufferers.

Crop pests are not the only subject of the game birds' attention. Hay fever sufferers who are starting their 1944 series of wheezes and sniffs will be glad to know that quail and pheasants are allies in the campaign against lesser ragweed, one of the major sources of hay fever irritation. Lesser ragweed seed was the most common vegetable item found in the stomachs of 61 bob white quail during a study in Pennsylvania.

★ The GARDEN ★

CORN smut has not been as common this season as in past summers, yet gardeners will be wise to watch for signs of this parasitic fungus, which usually appears after mid-August.

The first symptoms of corn smut are white swellings on the leaves and stalks before the ears form. Later, these swellings, which look like white blisters, may be found on the ear husks. The best method of control is that of cutting or tearing the swellings from the leaves and uprooting and burning stalks and ears which are heavily infested. If allowed to remain on the plants, the swellings enlarge and break open, showing a mass of black, moist material in which the fungus spores are contained. If these spores are allowed to reach complete development they become dry and are blown about the area, spreading the disease to other plants and infecting the soil.

"The Gardener's Diary" contains instructions for combatting all of the major diseases and insects common in Chicagoland gardens. The booklet is available from the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn st. and 435 N. Michigan av., for 15 cents over the counter, 18 cents by mail.

GEN. C. E. LEMAY MADE CHIEF OF B-29 COMMAND

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Curtis E. Lemay is the new chief of the 20th bomber command, operators of the fleet of B-29 Super Fortresses, the war department announced today.

Maj. Gen. C. E. Lemay.

Lemay, 37 years old, a native of Columbus, O., succeeds Brig. Gen. Kenneth B. Wolfe, recently appointed commanding general of the air forces section at Wright Field, O.

Until recently Lemay was commanding general of the heavy bombardment division of the 8th air force in England. As chief of the 20th command, his new theater will be the China-Burma-India area.

THREE ESCAPE FROM FLAMING AUTOS IN CRASH

Two men and a woman escaped from their burning automobiles last night after one was rammed by a Damen av. street car at 73d st., and pushed in the path of the other automobile. The fuel tank of an automobile driven by Louis Johnson, 55, of 7241 S. Winchester av., exploded and set fire to a car driven by Mrs. Minnie Huhn, 48, of 8226 S. Hermitage av.

Mrs. Huhn was injured slightly, but her husband, William, and Johnson were not hurt.

Fred Roberts, 75, of 4051 Drexel blvd., a retired undertaker, suffered a broken neck yesterday when his automobile was smashed between two 43d street Surface Line cars moving in opposite directions at Ellis av. A fire rescue squad cut thru the top of the automobile to extricate Roberts. He was removed to Chicago Memorial hospital.

$125 TELESCOPE STOLEN.

A telescope valued at $125 was stolen from the cabin cruiser Elnbill, anchored in Burnham park harbor early yesterday, William Golden, the owner, told police.

U. S. SPENDING ABROAD HIT FOR WASTE, UNREST

'Dubious Projects' Cited by Former WPB Aid.

cluded a large number of individuals of radical political beliefs, many of whom were exposed by the Dies committee, Johnston said. They had no experience or knowledge to fit them for their jobs, he said.

In addition to the plows, OEW requisitioned large quantities of other vitally needed equipment, such as bulldozers, road scrapers, concrete mixing machinery, and tractors.

Reviewers Without Veto.

As a member of the WPB reviewing board Johnston examined all such requisitions but the board had only advisory powers and could not veto the orders of other agencies.

In October, 1943, Johnston submitted to the director of the conservation division a report making several recommendations for preventing government agencies from running wild in requisitioning of goods for overseas shipment.

"I have become increasingly concerned," Johnston wrote in his report, "about the huge amounts of materials and products being allocated to Central and South American countries without, in my opinion, sufficient information to safeguard against excessive expenditures of money and equipment thru the incorrect supply or duplication of equipment, too liberal supply of spare parts, and other unnecessary waste."

Drain on Critical Items.

Johnston pointed out that in one agricultural program alone OEW requisitioned materials costing between 12½ and 14 million dollars, made up in large part of critical items. The latter included 1,691 tractors, 45 bulldozers, eight graders, seven shovels, 13 scrapers, and other equipment. These ranged in cost from $1,000 to $15,000 each.

Johnston suggested that each requisitioning agency be compelled to obtain an inventory of equipment and materials available in the country of destination before its requisitions would be approved.

He further recommended that the requisitioning agency be directed to see that all equipment sent abroad be utilized fully and not allowed to fall into disuse after a project had been completed.

Standardization Recommended.

Other recommendations included the standardization of motor equipment in each area to cut down the need for a variety of replacement parts and the full utilization of local labor and horse drawn equipment to relieve the drain on American supplies.

In this report, submitted to WPB Conservation Director Howard Coonley, Johnston said: "Many pieces of equipment used in road building, railroad construction, mining, and deforesting operations have completed their work and are now idle to the point of rust and decay. The Hochild mines in Bolivia has asked WPB what to do with a large quantity of used machinery."

Johnston's report was sent by Coonley to the foreign economic administration. Sixty days late, in January, 1944, W. H. Schubart, acting director of the supplies division of FEA, acknowledged receipt of the report and promised to give it careful consideration.

Action on Report Lacking.

That was the last Johnston heard of his recommendations. No action had been taken on them up to the time he quit the WPB in April.

Johnston told of another example of lack of intelligent planning in connection with the program sponsored and financed by the United States to promote the collection of wild rubber in Brazil.

Altho the WPB was not directly concerned with the project it was vitally affected thru the large amount of supplies requisitioned. The project was under the direction of the Rubber Development corporation, a subsidiary of the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

"The fantastic goal of the project," Johnston said, "was the recruiting of 50,000 natives to gather wild rubber. The most that was ever recruited was 3,000, but materials were requisitioned for the construction of 50,000 native huts to house the laborers.

Scarce Materials Wasted.

"These materials included large quantities of corrugated iron sheeting and lumber of which there was an acute scarcity in the United States."

Reports were received by WPB, Johnston said, that some of the material we sent to South American countries in connection with these projects was sold by contractors at fantastic prices. The contractors got more material and parts than they needed, he said, and sold them to farmers.

"Unfortunately the effect of this vast outlay of money on dubious projects has not improved our relations with South America," Johnston said. "We have disrupted the native economies in many areas. We paid wages obviously too high. The natives could earn in two days what they normally got in a week. As a result many of them would work two days and lay off the rest of the week.

Unrest Bred by Policy.

"Our so-called good neighborhood has bred unrest. We have poured money into those countries on ill planned projects which arouse the contempt of the natives. We have built roads for them which they will not be able to maintain when the war ends. This has been accomplished at the cost of millions of dollars to American taxpayers."

Johnston engaged in public relations work for 20 years in New York and Washington before taking his post with the WPB at the request of Coonley, a former president of the National Association of Manufacturers. Johnston said he expects to spend the next three months making speeches as a private citizen to acquaint the public with conditions in Washington.

DEADLINE TODAY IN LENDING CARS IN ORPHAN PICNIC

Chicago motorists were reminded yesterday that today is their last opportunity to volunteer to transport persons to the 40th annual outing of the Orphan's Automobile Day association Wednesday at the picnic grove of Riverview park. Approximately 4,500 orphans and adult inmates of various institutions, as well as 300 crippled children from private homes, will be guests of the association, John P. Keating, transportation chairman, said.

G. O. P. CREDITED FOR BILL ON RECONVERSION

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13 [Special].—Sen. Hatch [D., N. M.] said today "Republican control" of the senate was responsible for a substitution of a "states' rights" bill for legislation to set up federal standards of post-war unemployment compensation.

The senator referred to the passage Friday by a Republican-southern Democratic coalition of a reconversion bill sponsored by Sen. George [D., Ga.] after voting down, 49 to 25, the administration backed Kilgore-Murray bill under which jobless payments would be set by congress. The George bill, passed by 55 to 19, gives the states control over jobless pay.

"I have no hesitation in saying the Republican minority, aided by certain elements of the Democratic party, actually has been in control of the senate for two years," Hatch declared.

Sen. Hawkes [R., N. J.] said he thought the vote indicated the nation wanted "to stop the concentration of power in a centralized government, an idea upon which the New Deal philosophy has been built."

Debut Parties Will Brighten Yule Holidays

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE Christmas holiday season promises to be fairly gay for the young women of debutante age, altho there will not be the dancing parties of previous years because of the lack of young men. The day after Christmas has been selected as the date of a tea which Mr. and Mrs. C. Wallace Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Robinson Jr. will give to introduce to society their daughters, Miss Joan Fulton Johnson and Miss Anne Wilson. The party will be given at the Woman's Athletic club.

Miss Johnson, her parents, and elder sister, Miss Angeline Johnson, who had a Christmas debut three seasons ago, are at their Lake Geneva, Wis., home for the summer, and Miss Wilson and her mother are in the east. Both young women were graduated from the Girls' Latin school and have been good friends for several years. Miss Johnson will enter Pine Manor this fall, stopping off for a gay week-end at West Point on her way to college. Mrs. Johnson will go east with her daughter.

When Miss Ann Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Elliott Johnson, arrives home this week from Pasadena, Cal., the debutante and her parents will discuss plans for a tea at Christmas time, perhaps to be held in the Evanston home of her parents and grandparents, the Chester Bradfords. Miss Johnson was graduated from Roycemore and attends Northwestern university. She traveled west with Miss Margaret Merrick.

Just back from a month in Vancouver, British Columbia, Mrs. John Glen Sample and her daughter, Sally, also are thinking in terms of a Christmas debut party. The debutante, a graduate of the Madeira school, probably will enter Sarah Lawrence college next month.

If Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Trude decide to give a party for their debutante daughter, Patricia, it will be a small one during the Christmas holidays. Miss Trude was graduated in June from Penn Hall, Chambersburg, Pa.

Sept. 2 is the date for a debut luncheon which Mrs. John Eager Lloyd of Hubbard Woods will give at the Indian Hill club for her granddaughter, Miss Peggy Cox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore F. Cox of New Orleans. Debutantes of the season and a few older girls will be invited. Miss Cox, her mother, and Mrs. Cox's sister, Mrs. William Ward Clore, will receive at the luncheon, which will precede the debut tea of Miss Elaine Sidley, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pratt Sidley, in the Sidley's Winnetka home that afternoon.

Here and There.

Being welcomed back to Evanston is Lt. Comdr. George H. Schulz, who has spent more than a year on duty in the Pacific. At the end of his leave he and his wife, the former Mary Dawes, and their youngsters will go to Washington, D. C., to live. Miss Emily and Miss Margaret Goehst and their brother, John Goehst, are entertaining at cocktails Wednesday afternoon so that Comdr. Schulz's old Chicago friends may have a chance to chat with him.

Also back in Chicago is Joseph E. Nolan, who will be leaving the country soon in a civilian capacity on a government mission overseas. He has been in Washington, D. C., for the last two weeks. Mrs. Nolan and their four children will remain in Northbrook during Mr. Nolan's absence.

Having spent several months in the Aleutians with a PT boat squadron in sleet, snow, rain and fog, Lt. Weymouth Kirkland and several of his fellow officers now are sweltering in the wilting heat of New Orleans, where the squadron is undergoing further training. Lt. Kirkland was in town recently on leave before going to his new assignment.

Among new army promotions are those of Sydney Waud and his brother, Morrison Waud. The former, who is serving in India with the medical corps, recently was advanced to the rank of lieutenant colonel. He may be back in this country before the year is over to see his parents, the Ernest Wauds, of Chicago, and his wife, who, with their three children, is living in Rumson, N. J. Morrison Waud, who is stationed in Ohio with the army air forces, now is a major.

On the Calendar.

When the Chicago Opera company returns after a year's absence to the stage of the Civic Opera house to begin a five week engagement on Oct. 16, many service men will be in the audience, thanks to the newly organized Servicemen's Opera Fund, which will provide the men in uniform with free tickets to all performances. Hundreds of free seats were financed by the Illinois Opera Guild during the 1942 season, and it is hoped that many more will be available this year thru the combined efforts of the guild and the company.

The Hinsdale Junior center of the Infant Welfare society, which usually sponsors a horse show as its large benefit project for the year, is turning its efforts this year to a country fair to be held on Sept. 9 and 10 at the Oakbrook stables. The stables have just been remodeled, and the white Dutch doors will provide natural "booths" in which to display the wares, which will include aprons and pot holders, baby bonnets, plants, and flowers, bakery goods, jams, vegetables, antiques, and resalable articles.

Mrs. David Thomas is general chairman of the fair, with Mrs. Robert Tiffany as her assistant. Some of those who will be in charge of booths are Mrs. Russell Davis, Mrs. James Emmett Jr., Mrs. Walter Mueller, Mrs. William Singer, Mrs. Ben Beale and Mrs. Joseph Frederickson. Mrs. Raymond Ruthenberg will be in charge of jeep rides for the children, and Mrs. Lloyd Sarty, of pony rides.

Thru the Looking Glass

The list of allergies is long and fascinating, and the more we find out about them the more we realize there are precious few substances to which some individual, by a quirk of the complex human chemistry, may not be abnormally sensitive. There are people who can't eat eggs, others who will sneeze when chocolate is served, still others who can't use perfume, or wear wool, or apply adhesive tape to the skin surface.

What's true of these substances—that in themselves they're harmless to the millions and irritating only to the rare one—is true of cosmetics. Virtually every cosmetic you can name might be an irritant to one woman in a million, simply because her body chemistry varies from the normal. There are, somewhere in the world, the rare women who react a little badly to the things you and armies of other women use daily—face powder, a dentifrice, a lipstick, nail enamel, cologne, cream, and even that newest of cosmetics, leg makeup.

But they do exist, these allergies, and lately we've seen a few references to the skin irritation that follows the use of leg makeup. We have a theory, and we give it today for what it's worth, that this allergy could be reduced sharply, if not eliminated entirely, if women would abandon their habit of shaving the legs and applying makeup immediately.

We don't know why it is, but when the average woman uses a razor she will never use a shaving cream or a rich lather over the surface as a man does. A few women will sprinkle talc over the surface first, but more will use nothing. They'll simply stroke the dry surface, hard. And 99 times out of 100 a woman will use a blade that a man would throw away.

This combination of faulty shaving technique tears the skin, altho the injury may not be visible to the eye. After the kind of bad shave the average woman gives the leg surface, the skin is extra sensitive and usually full of minute abrasions. It's at this point, as a rule, that she applies her leg makeup, rubbing it in with a vengeance.

It's just this, we suspect, that lies at the root of those allergies to leg makeup we hear about. We could be wrong, of course, but inquiry shows that, in the few cases we've come across, the legs had always been shaved, and, in the usual feminine fashion, quite roughly, immediately before the makeup was applied.

String Quartet Richly Repays Ravinia Crowd

Concerts by the Budapest String Quartet [Josef Roismann, first violin; Edgar Ortenberg, second violin; Boris Kroyt, viola; Mischa Schneider, violoncello]. Presented at Ravinia Saturday evening, Aug. 12, and Sunday afternoon, Aug. 13, 1944. The programs:

Saturday evening.
Quartet, D major, Opus 76, No. 5 ..... Haydn
Quartet, G major, Köchel 387...Mozart
Quartet, E minor, Opus 59, No. 2 ..... Beethoven

Sunday afternoon.
Quartet, G minor, Opus 74 No. 3, "The Horseman" ..... Haydn
Quartet, B flat major, Köchel 458 ..... Mozart
Quartet, C major, Opus 59, No. 3 ..... Beethoven

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY.

The Budapest String Quartet is fast developing that sixth Ravinia sense that warns habitués of approaching trains almost before they actually cleave the concert air. Josef Roismann, the first violin, has generally emerged victorious in this game of musical guesswork, tho Saturday night he lost a couple of decisions as snorting monsters roared by the park at moments when an enraptured hush would have been more respectful. However, I doubt that the Budapest four seriously object to these extraneous noises—certainly not to the murmurous song of the katydids, the crickets and the tree toads—because of the compensating size of Ravinia audiences. Chamber music is supposed to be caviar, but 5,550 people have heard the three concerts so far played, and with any luck at all Tuesday's farewell with the Beethoven Septet will tilt the figure up past the customary 7,000 or so.

The two week-end concerts continued to explore the realms of Haydn, Mozart, and Beethoven, and there scarcely could be more rewarding guides than these Russian visitors. Mr. Roismann is a vigorous first violin, who can state a phrase with authority or embroider it with brilliance. Mr. Kroyt's viola has balancing richness and depth, and the delights of Mr. Schneider's cello are solid concert comforts. His playing in the third Rasoumowsky was a peak of Beethoven performance. Fortunately, Mr. Ortenberg, the new second violin, fits without audible wrinkles into an ensemble America wisely has learned to cherish.

Every man to his own choice in the music played, for all of it was good, and certainly the three quartets of Beethoven's Opus 59 are in their own way incomparable. But somehow this time my heart went out to Haydn. The gravity, the exquisite serenity, and yet the probing profundity of the slow movements, the sparkle, the flow of ideas, the flawless yet boldly bravura structure—these seemed in Budapest performance the essence of quartet form, the very incarnation of purity in style.

Beside them, the Mozart gleamed with a dark and fluid luster, and the Rasoumowsky three, particularly the final quartet in C major, strained at the very seams of quartet form, demanding almost orchestral effects from the players, subsiding into slow movements of such somber splendor they verged on grandeur, rearing again into rebellious turbulence and ending, as in the C major, with a fugal effect so imperious you understand why so many conductors have tried to translate it in terms of full string orchestra.

It is a pleasure and a privilege to hear such music richly played, and to know that it is a treasure house with doors now open to the public. Where the Budapest quartet is concerned, Ravinia's sponsors are entitled to a very special bow.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

Professional Parents.

Kay Chase, author of the radio serial "Painted Dreams," is married to Art Berg, formerly in radio, now in the navy. Not long ago their first child was born. The proud, happy father called long distance and heard—he exclaimed delightedly—his baby cry. So exciting an experience was it that he promptly confided in his superior officer: "It's my first baby . . . and I heard it cry, sir."

The officer was unmoved.

"You're lucky you're on the end where you can hang up," he commented sourly.

Going to the Dogs.

Thought you'd like to know that bobby sox fashions are going to the dogs!

The latest teen-age fashion whim [I discovered yesterday] is a brightly colored, metal trimmed dog collar. Honestly, I saw two teenagers buying them at the counter for dog equipment—trying them on, remarking they "liked the one with bells on."

I can't be certain that I overheard correctly, as I am not a Nosey Parker ordinarily, yet, I believe I heard a saleswoman remark they had been swamped with sales of a certain size dog collar since a recent fashion show.

White collar—dog collars—is fashion a yoke?

Time Saver.

An employer of our town advises his employes "not to get mad. It takes too much time!"

"It takes time to work yourself into a rage," he continues; "then it takes time to cool off, to apologize, to resume your orderly affairs. It takes the other fellow's time; he has to get mad, cool off, accept your apology, and settle down to his tasks. It's a double time-waster!"

"Beware sending a memorandum of criticism to other parts of the organization when you feel irritated by another's error of commission or omission," a business publication advises.

"Don't be deceived by the piece of sand that gets under the shell of an oyster, sets up irritation, and achieves a pearl. On human beings, irritation has more nearly the effect that a similar bit of sand produces on a complex piece of machinery—an upset or breakdown!

This Film Tale of Three Little Sisters Is Cute

"THREE LITTLE SISTERS."
A Republic picture, directed by Joseph Santley, featuring Mary Lee, Ruth Terry, Cheryl Walker, William Terry, and Frank Jenks, and presented at the Oriental.

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

The three little sisters aren't the Andrews girls, for which give thanks — or not — as you please.

Impersonated by Mary Lee, Ruth Terry, and Cheryl Walker, they're cute tricks and the story they enliven is a merry and somewhat unusual conceit. A great big well meaning lie told by one of the three little sisters in a letter to a service man whom she's never seen involves the three—and practically everybody they know—in a whirlwind of complications, tho, as you will surmise, all turns out be-yew-ti-fully for the finale.

Sister Hallie romances in her letters. Tells about the big manor house in which she and her sisters live, about the old colored retainer and his marvelous champagne cocktails which are such a boon to her dear daddy when he comes home weary from making money in the marts of stylish trade, of the billowing gowns she wears at the dances given nightly in the old mansion. And she signs "Lily" to her letters. . . . She's really doing all this to interest Pvt. Robert Mason, whom she never expects will be able to check on her — his camp being far, far away. . . .

The truth is, Lily is her lame sister. The sisters do hand laundry and their daddy is the town handy man, AND the manor house is a beautiful old place being offered for sale by the town Shylock, a mean real estate man with a passion for foreclosures. . . .

Tho I hate to give away plots I can't resist telling you that Pvt. Robert gets a furlough and — not alone but with friends — comes to enjoy the hospitality of ye old manor and its occupants. . . . AND, believe it or not — DOES. . . .

You see—sort of a Damon Runyan-O-Henry-ish sort of a little yarn.

The girls are charming, and young Mr. Terry, who looks a lot like Van Johnson, is awfully nice. . . . Frank Jenks contributes some of his sweet, hard-boiled comedy [I love that man] and the dialog's not bad. . . . Especially I liked the lines spoken by the Negro [town taxicab driver], who takes over as the old retainer — to a woman aid:

"You don't look like no old family retainer. You got that 50 cents an hour look stamped all over you."

See you tomorrow.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 13.—A day in San Francisco is like a shot in the arm. I left here at 7:00 a. m. and learned that the driver of the bus to the airport doubles nights as John in the Pilgrimage play. . . . Was met in San Francisco by William Newberry, who went there for a two week rest and loafed for four and a half years. He now represents Metro in San Francisco. The day before, he had tried to place a $1,500 ad in the paper up there but was turned down—no space. . . . Lunched at the Palace hotel with 400 women and men who had gotten on the band wagon for Thomas Dewey. There was George Medalie, former United States district attorney of New York, who gave Dewey his first public job when he was 29; William Reichel, Mrs. Jessie Williamson, and Mrs. C. C. Baker. All of them spoke. It was a grand get-together. . . . Later, at Louis Lurie's office, he told about his start in Chicago as a newsboy when he was 9. Later on I visited with Mrs. George Cameron, Nan Tucker, Jerome Zerbe, and a brace of gold braided naval officers. Douglas Shearer, head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sound department, and William B. Slaughter Jr. came in to say good-by. They're off on a special kind of service. They're two of the first six chosen, and are so new at it they haven't even put on their uniforms yet. . . . Mrs. George Pope gave up her beautiful St. Francis apartment to Admirals Halsey, Nimitz and King when they met up there some time ago. . . . I stopped in to say hello to the fellows at the Stage Door Canteen, with Mrs. Clarence Lindner in charge. The canteen is much roomier than ours. They cornered a new grand piano while I was there. . . .. On to Jack's for dinner with the Luries and a dozen of their friends. Spotted Ina Claire and husband William Wallace there. . . . Then caught the Lark, and ran into Lloyd Pantages. He has been transferred from Medford, Ore., to Santa Barbara. His job will be finding entertainment for the fellows in the three hotels taken over there for the army. He'll do a good job of it, too.

This Will Be Action Plus.

Today the first treatment on "Now It Can Be Told" is being mailed by Twentieth Century to J. Edgar Hoover for approval. Producer Louis de Rochemont reviewed 54 sabotage and spy cases from 1939 to the present with the FBI head, and Twentieth is using them as background for a series of pictures. The treatments are being done by Barrie Lyndon and Charles Gordon Boothe. This series will show you the real thing, and, boy, will it pack a wallop! One of the stories deals with Senor Don Julio Lopez, who was killed in 1939 by a taxi cab in Washington. An FBI agent found a slip of paper in his pocket which led to the discovery that he was Capt. Ulrich von der Osten, one of Hitler's top agents.

Some of This and That.

Irene Manning goes into the second femme lead in "Strangers In Our Midst," which is a remake of "Petrified Forest." . . . Judge A. L. Ashby, prominent radio network attorney, is here from New York seeing old friends and making many new ones. . . . Greer Garson now owns four of Angna Enters' paintings. In fact, Angna's done very well here. She has sold 27 canvases, another story to Metro, and has her next year's one woman theater tour all booked. . . . Edith Atwater, who looks and acts like Rosalind Russell and who's playing in "Tomorrow the World," may be signed by Paramount by the time this reaches print. . . . Eddie Cline is packing up his bits and pieces to go on and direct Olsen and Johnson's new show, which will open in Philadelphia.

Roundabout News.

On the set of "The Great John L." Wallace Ford showed me a note he'd received from Capt. Robert Cohn in the South Pacific. It said, "Ran into a chap over here who's married to Ginger Rogers. He gave me her phone number. Will you please call her up and tell her he's o. k.? He's on special duty with the radio department. Even gives the surprise news which is called 'Platter Happy.'"

Better Than Nothing.

Jack Carson, who hasn't had a vacation in 18 months, between radio and pictures, is now going to get one on the instalment plan—that is, five days at a time between radio shows for the next month. . . . Henry Hull and his wife leave Tuesday for their Connecticut farm. Henry, who's just finished "Objective Burma," will take a short rest there before going on to New York to start his new radio show. . . . Ella Logan is starting another European tour at the suggestion of Gen. Eisenhower. . . . Omar Kiam is back in his own beautiful home in Bel Air for a month's vacation. . . . Stanley Cortez, who photographed "Away," is doing the same job for Lt. Col. Frank Capra, whose latest film, "America at War," is terrific. . . . Sonja Henie insists she wants to do a straight dramatic part. If our little skater's set her mind on it—she'll do it! . . . Helen Welber reports the exit line of a starlet to a temperamental rival: "Don't worry, dear, you'll never be your own worst enemy . . . not so long as I'm alive!"

A Wheel Chair Sought for Son of Service Man

(Activities of the Sally Joy Brown department are sponsored by Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.)

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

We feel sure that upon reading Mrs. J.'s appeal, any reader who is able to help her will be more than glad to do so.

"Dear Miss Brown: I am writing to you with regard to my 18 year old son. The child has been crippled and helpless since birth. It has always been necessary for him to use a wheel chair, and the one we now use, which we have had most of his life, is so badly worn that it can no longer be repaired. In fact, it is now unsafe for him to use. His only pleasure in life is a regular trip to the park in his chair, but I have been unable to take him there for many weeks.

"My husband is in service and I live alone with the boy on our $80 monthly allowance. It is impossible to purchase another chair, since I am barely able to make ends meet, and this is my only source of income. I am unable to work as I must devote all my time to caring for my son. I simply cannot see my way clear to buy a chair, and I have no relatives who could help me. You have no idea how much it would mean to me, my husband, and our son if we could take him out once more."

The address is on the northwest side of the city. Further information will be provided on request.

GASOLINE ALLEY

(Copyright: 1944: By Ines Eliot.)

INSTALMENT XIII.

DRUNKEN STUPOR.

There was a long silence. Carol could scarcely see Bright Stoner.

"I'll do my job," he said at last. "You don't have to sell me on that! But you get to Brochard's in time. You've got to, Kansas! You see, I——"

He moved even closer, his sentence unfinished. Then she felt his arms around her and the stern tenderness of his mouth on hers. For one wild moment she yielded to the ecstasy of having the dream which had been in her heart so long come true.

"We're in a war, Bright," she said shakily. "War is no time for love!"

"You sweet fool!" he said softly. "Love is all we have left right now—love and death and maybe hope! You get to Brochard's, Carol! Remember, I'm carryin' your books from now on."

"I'll remember, Bright."

It was only when she had reached the floor on which the main bedrooms were situated that Carol again fully realized what she had to face.

The door of the big room which had been Lita's was ahead of her. It was unlocked. She opened it and went in. The place was full of reminders which made her heart ache.

The mistress of the castle must have taken very little with her, for the room looked as if she had expected to return at any moment. Carol wanted to examine everything carefully. Knowing Lita as she did herself, she felt that going thru her sister's belongings should tell her a great deal. But the musical gong which announced dinner was sounding its mellow note in the hall below. She made a hasty reparation of her makeup and answered the summons.

The familiar stairway with its tapestried walls and the bright red carpeting had a strangely melancholy air as she went down. Something had gone out of the place—the gay, happy atmosphere which had given the essentially grim, medieval building so much charm had vanished. When she had been here before the castle had been filled with the warmth of the happy life Lita and Jacques had shared. Now the grim quality seeped thru every gay hanging, enveloped each gimcrack, hung in shadowy corners like an evil mist as if the cruel age in which it had been built had returned to reclaim it. A burst of coarse laughter from the drawing room affirmed this impression. It took a great deal of will power to smile as she opened the drawing room door.

The same men were still there, standing now about a tray of cocktails and canapes. But Jacques was not with them.

"To our beautiful hostess!" Fritz Uhlan raised his glass toward her.

"Isn't my husband back?" she asked. "I had thought he would be with you."

There was an almost imperceptible pause before Janner answered her and she fancied that the flaccid Bachmann and von Kirch exchanged covert glances. Then their chief spoke casually.

"Ah, our delightful Jacques!" he said. "He will not, I think, come home for a while. He has gone to Cannes on important business."

One did not usually go to Cannes by way of the military trail, Carol thought. But she accepted the statement with apparent calm.

"In that case we had better go ahead with dinner,' she said quietly.

Janner walked beside her, leading the way to the big hall of the castle where dinner was served, and she noticed that he did not offer his arm. She still sensed his violent interest in her, or rather his interest in Lita, but now she realized that he was hesitant about touching her, even tho the formality of a customary gesture. It began to look as tho Lita must have repulsed him in some way he had not forgotten. However that might be, it was good to be able to keep one's distance. For all his fine manners and good looks this Janner was peculiarly repulsive to Carol.

The dinner itself surpassed anything Carol had seen in the way of food for many months. France might be starving but her conquerors were not. Bachmann ate greedily, Von Kirch was coldly polite. But in the middle of the meal Fritz Uhlan, who had made his dinner chiefly of champagne, swayed dangerously in his chair. Janner gave a brief order to Hans, the orderly, who stood behind him, and arose himself to aid that stone faced giant in helping Uhlan from the room.

"We will send him coffee in the drawing room," Janner said to Carol. "He will be all right."

"Why not send him home?" Carol wondered aloud.

"Ah! But he so enjoys your company!" Janner's voice was silken smooth. "Besides we had thought to play a little game of cards later."

There was nothing she could say. Gen. Bachmann, the knife with which he was paring a piece of fruit shaking in his pudgy white hands, stared after the two men—the stalwart Janner and the unsteady slender fool of a Uhlan.

"Most solicitous about his friends, Janner is!" he said in a peculiar voice and Carol felt there was both hatred and fear behind the smooth tones. "I—well, I'd have left the orderly to look after a man in such a state! But Janner—no! He looks after his friends himself. I hope he does not ever have to look after me, too!"

"But you are a moderate drinker," Carol was puzzled.

"But not always a moderate thinker." Gen. Bachmann laughed as if it were a huge joke. "Which is almost as unwise!"

"Bachmann!" Von Kirch's voice held a peremptory warning, but the other ignored it and persisted.

"I still think it is sentimental to trust friends," he added.

His voice died away as Janner reentered the room.

Gen. Bachmann's words had been in the nature of a confession—one which von Kirch plainly had not relished. But Bachmann's tone had implied that she might understand some undercurrent about these four men's relationship to each other—and that he welcomed her awareness of it. What was the nature of that undercurrent?

When a little later they returned to the drawing room, Fritz Uhlan was in no condition for the promised game of cards.

Carol served the coffee with polite formality, planning to excuse herself and go upstairs as soon as she dared. The desire to search Lita's room for some clues was overpowering. Moreover, the room adjoining, which Jacques occupied, might be revealing if only she could manage to ransack it properly. Above all there was a reason for retiring so important that she dared not dwell on it for fear of communicating her thought to the men around her. It was from Lita's room that the secret stairway led down to this very room in which she stood—the room in which Jacques' coveted collection lay idly hidden beneath the parquet, not three feet beyond the grand piano.

BY MARY MEADE.

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

I'm going to turn tables today, dear readers, and ask you for a couple of recipes! Now and then our cookery library fails us, unfortunately. We haven't been able to turn up recipes for two Bohemian breads which a reader has asked for, and would like some good cook to send them to us.

One is a horn roll, which our correspondent thinks is called "botchki"; the other bread is "rohlitchki" or a reasonable facsimile. She isn't sure of the spelling and neither am I. Can any one help us out with these recipes?

The prize contest editor thinks I'd better tell readers to address only prize contest entries to "Recipe Contest, Chicago Tribune." She has been getting some letters requesting recipes or other cooking information, and while she always answers them, the replies may be delayed because of the time required to read and sort contest mail. So if you want us to send you a recipe, address your letter to Mary Meade. If you want to send us a recipe which you think merits a $5 prize, address your letter "Recipe Contest." Thanks.

Chinese cooks don't boil shrimps in the shells. They think they become too watery that way. Instead, they shell the shrimps and then steam or boil them in a small amount of water.

Top grades of beef still are and will continue to be scarce. Black market operators are continuing to get much of the best beef which is available, keeping it away from legitimate, federally inspected plants, which are the only plants furnishing our uniformed services with meat.

Beef stews and pot roasts and braised beef will more and more replace steaks and oven roasts in our diet. These cheaper grades of meat are just as nutritious as high grade beef, luckily for us.

Many a reader has asked us what to do with hot "banana peppers." This recipe is a good answer.

Hot Banana Peppers in Oil.

1 bunch celery
4 cloves garlic
2 cups olive oil or salad oil
⅓ cup salt

Remove ribs, stems and seeds of peppers and cut into ¼-inch strips. Slice celery, using leaves. Add salt and garlic and let stand overnight. Press out juice and place relish in half pint jars. Do not pack too tightly. Fill with oil to within ½ inch of the top and seal.

SHOP WITH A BASKET; YOUR GROCER IS SHORT OF PAPER SACKS.

Jellied Cabbage and Grape Salad
Brown Bread
Bakery Chocolate Cake
Milk Coffee or Tea

Potato Omelet—Beat 4 egg yolks, ¼ cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, and ⅛ teaspoon pepper into 1½ cups mashed potatoes. Beat 4 egg whites stiff and fold into the potato mixture. Turn into a hot frying pan in which 2 tablespoons fat have been melted. When puffy, and cooked, spread half with parsley, and fold.

$5 PRIZE RECIPE.

Chocolate Molasses Milk Drink.

[About 1½ cups basic sirup.]

½ cup sorghum molasses
½ cup corn sirup
2 tablespoons honey
¼ cup water
½ cup cocoa or 1 7-oz. package chocolate chips

Combine all ingredients and heat slowly to boiling point. Remove from heat and when cool store in covered jar in refrigerator. Use 2 teaspoons sirup to each cup of milk and heat slowly, stirring constantly, until well blended. Chill to serve or serve hot. The sirup also may be used as a sauce for sundaes.

Foster Quality of Chivalry in Boys and Girls

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"Billy isn't the least gallant toward his little girl neighbor," said a mother to me the other day. "If she has something she loves and he wants it, he simply takes it away from her. Sparks fly, I can tell you, and she'll retaliate by grabbing something he values.

"It's amusing to watch them at the tender age of three and a half, but I do want him to be chivalrous. . . ."

Sportsmanship, protectiveness, and what we sometimes call "chivalry" are not qualities necessarily natural to boys and girls. They are attitudes that have to be taught over a period of years.

If, for instance, we want our children to be chivalrous, we have to implant and foster that quality while they are young—that is, when they reach an age at which they can understand the idea. Ordinarily we pair knighthood and chivalry in our minds and connect the latter only with men, but it is really something that a girl, as well as a boy, may practice.

When older and younger children play together is one time when both boys and girls can be taught to be chivalrous. Children often seem really "mean" to each other, but that usually is only because their imagination doesn't operate on a situation. I have seen boys do what looked like dreadful things to younger children when all they actually were doing was getting a lot of kick out of the excitement of the yells, the surprise, or the funny faces the youngsters made when they howled.

The advantage they take and the real pain they inflict have to be explained to them again and again for them to get it. It is here that, besides being negative and prevailing upon them to stop, it is well to be positive and make them feel that instead of tormenting them, they should protect the younger children.

Then, there is the matter of making fun of children who are helpless against them. Not to make a butt of a child who is nervous, weak, or different from the average run of playmates; not to tease, ridicule, make fun of his looks, his manner, his clothes, to his utter misery—these, too, are things many children have to be taught.

It is the part of chivalry to "lay off" those children, and this feeling is something that both girls and boys need to have instilled in them. If they're appealed to on the ground that they're taking advantage of some one who can't come back at them, that it's unfair, unkind, and not being a good sport—they gradually will understand.

Members of the Edgebrook Garden club will be hostesses to the Garden Club of Illinois at a meeting at 12:30 p. m. today in the Edgebrook Golf club. After the luncheon hour and afternoon program, the group will tour gardens in Lincolnwood, Wildwood, and Edgebrook.

Household Forum

By Louise Bargelt

Mrs. Dan B., Chicago—I found tears in some old lace curtains. I took bits of lace, starched them, and pressed them over the tears. They will last till next washing.

Mrs. Ken H., Oak Park—I'm doing my housekeeping in one room now and haven't much room for extra kitchen equipment. Have found that I can improvise a double boiler when I want to melt chocolate or similar food by placing a small measuring cup in one which is slightly larger.

Mrs. Fred S., Racine, Wis.—When I fry meat and want to be sure to keep it from splashing, I sprinkle a little salt in the pan.

A House Frock

Front buttoning makes this cool house frock easy to launder and iron. Rickrack braid is the simple trimming material used around neckline and kimono sleeves. If you wish, put appliques on the two large patch pockets. Style No. 2773 is designed for sizes 12 to 46. Size 36 requires 4 yards of 35 inch fabric with 2 yards of rickrack. Applique pattern No. 11215 must be ordered separately. Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing.

Evening Gowns of Floor Length Are Welcomed

BY REA SEEGER.

New floor length evening gowns, the kind that swirl romantically with yards and yards of thin or not so thin materials in the skirt to accentuate the tiny fitted bodice tops, are being welcomed back with all the fervor usually given a prodigal's reappearance. In the college collections these gowns give star performances. Hardly a trunk will go to college without one or two. And when the college crowd hurries into dream dance dresses, the rest of the female world will be right behind.

You can, as in years gone by, select long, slinky models of jersey or clinging crepes. This fall they're featured in chalk white with fillips in such colors as chartreuse, cerise, tangerine, mauve, and flame. Sashes, swathed peplums, and mammoth bows on the chest are some of the trick ways of introducing subtle or strong contrasts. The jersey gowns are marvels of sculptured drapery, with that plastered to the figure effect. For undiluted sophistication try any of the new form revealing jersey gowns in statuesque white, pastels, or soot black.

Provocatively swish gowns dramatize taffeta, with a wide, full, long skirt, usually of black, attached to a pert young bodice in contrast or patterned design. Plaids, stripes, dots, and brocaded figures against such lively colors as green, red, yellow, and vivid blue make extremely effective foils for the dark contrast of black or dark blue skirts. Still the dream dresses of every ogling stag line are those of net or sheer, with the fluttering models in confectionery colored nets getting all the whistling spectators. Black net with scarlet sequined roses, black net with a salmon pink satin bodice, black net over white, black net with ruffles are this year's charmers to lure the boys.

Accessory Set

BY ELLEN BRUCE.

A delightful crocheted outfit for fall and winter is the three piece bag, scarf, and hat ensemble. It is crocheted of four ply cotton. Created of bright red and white, it is an ideal complement to a ski suit, or with a new fall suit or coat.

For instructions in crocheting the three piece set, No. 161, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth av., New York 1, N. Y.

Women in War Work

By Dorothy Johnson

The concert which three leading musicians now in uniform will give at 3 p. m. tomorrow in the music room of the United States naval hospital at the Great Lakes Naval Training center will be reciprocal hospitality. Since last October, when the Illinois Opera Guild equipped the room to afford musical pleasure for convalescent patients, members have staffed it daily. Tomorrow's program and tea will be given by naval personnel as a gesture of appreciation.

Chief specialist John Carter, former Metropolitan Opera company tenor, now stationed at Great Lakes; Musician 2d Class Harold Turner, concert pianist on military leave from radio station W-G-N, and Musician 2d Class Oscar Chanson, violinist, before his enlistment a member of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, will give the concert.

Capt. Alfred J. Toulon, medical officer, and Mrs. Toulon will be among the special guests. Mrs. William E. Ragland [Edith Mason], vice president of the guild, will be hostess. Mrs. Albert H. Ulrich, program chairman, has arranged the program, with Mrs. Millard B. Kennedy supervising the tea tables.

The guild's regular hostesses at the music room concerts, Mrs. James Cregear, Mrs. Warner Nelson, Mrs. Clayton A. Dunham, Mrs. Eldridge Allen, Mrs. Elmer J. Dick, Mrs. Howard Willett, Mrs. Verne Kennedy, Mrs. Hugo Dalmar, Mrs. Raymond Burnett, and Mrs. Frank R. Fuller, will assist Mrs. Millard Kennedy.

The guild's music room project was inspired by Mrs. James G. McMillan, president. Under her guidance, the organization furnished the large and homelike room on the "upper deck" of the medical recreation building, providing a grand piano, recording machines, a large collection of good music on records, cabinets, and colorful draperies and slipcovers. Members of the guild serving as hostesses are on duty once a week for at least two months.

The American Camp and Hospital Service, 540 Briar pl., has been requested by Red Cross field directors at Vaughan General hospital, Hines, to extend to that institution its program of monthly distribution of wrapped prizes to be used by convalescent soldiers in their games in the wards.

Mrs. Louis Green, president, reports that the service has completed its latest project, the decoration and furnishing of a recreation room for chief petty officers at the naval air technical training center, 87th and Anthony sts.

The organization's membership has increased to 175. Mrs. Theodore Lee and Mrs. Jerome Weil, co-chairmen of membership, will give a luncheon on Aug. 23 at headquarters. Another projected event on the calendar is the annual autumn money raising party on Sept. 30. Plans are being formulated by Mrs. Green and Miss M. Karel Spak, entertainment chairman, with Mrs. Harry Cohn and Mrs. Jerome Neiderman assisting.

Mrs. Jean Schenker recently was appointed director of the club's "happy day" and memorial fund, to which members give money in behalf of the organization's work instead of remembering family members with gifts on birthdays and other occasions. Another newly appointed officer is Mrs. Eleanor Streicker, financial secretary.

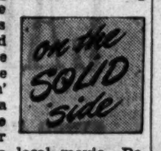
Dating Poses a Problem of Transport, Too

BY MAUREEN DALY.

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

No reasonable Honeychile expects to see her young galahad come riding up on a white horse these days and she would be even more surprised to see her ever-lovin' joe arrive in a red convertible or the family car to take her to a local movie. Because we all are in the red, white, and blue department, no girl objects to walking on a date these days. It's just "healthy and patriotic," with no questions asked.



On a Friday night it isn't more than a jog and a trot to a nearby theater for a malt-and-movie evening; it is just "pleasant walking distance" down to the drug store for a coke and conversation or over to some pal joey's house to listen to records with the gang for an evening. And if young joe and his honeychile are going uptown, down to the beach, or any longer distance, even the most particular pigeon won't object to taking a bus or street car. Of course, the same old rules for picking up a date at her home and dropping her off right where you found her at the end of the evening still apply, but no boy should hesitate to make a date because he has neither the car nor the gas for the evening.

For a formal dance or for any special evening, a taxi is always available. A thoughtful joe will want his twenty-twenty little squab to look as sweet and lovely when she arrives for the dance as when she left home, and white organdy or fluffy pink net formals are out of place on a bus or street car. Cabs are especially busy these days, so be sure to call one in time and let your date know just when you will arrive at her home to pick her up. Two or more couples might make plans together so the fare can be split enough ways to leave the fellows a little extra jingling money. For that ultra-evening, a cab is a splendid courtesy; your date will appreciate it.

Visual Education Group Told About Wartime Advances

War time impetus has caused a 25 year advance in visual education, members of the National Association of Visual Education Dealers were told yesterday in the Palmer house by J. M. Stackhouse, Richmond, Va., president. They opened a two day conference which will wind up with a banquet tonight. The 275 members sell motion picture films and related visual material to public schools, colleges and government agencies.

Theodore R. Gamble, Washington, D. C., director of the war finance division of the treasury, presented D. T. Davis, Lexington, Ky., and H. U. M. Higgins, Los Angeles, Cal., with trophies for outstanding achievements in the showing of war movies seen by more than nine million persons at 5th war loan rallies.

According to Culbertson

[Copyright: 1944: By Ely Culbertson.]

It is, of course, wise to beat a contract one trick surely rather than to speculate on a two trick set, but even this sound policy can be overdone. To wit:

East, dealer.

NORTH.
♠ 10 4 2
♥ J 6 5 2
♦ 9
♣ K 8 5 4 3

WEST.
♠ 6
♥ 10 4
♦ A 6 5 4 3 2

EAST.
♠ 7 5
♥ A K Q 9 7 3
♦ Q 10 8 7
♣ 7

SOUTH.
♠ A K Q J 9 8 3
♥ 8
♦ K J
♣ Q J 10

The bidding:

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 heart | 4 spades | Double | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

East-West could have made five diamonds, but it was risky for West to mention his suit at the five level.

West opened the heart 10, and altho a low card was played from dummy, East overtook with the queen in order to return the club seven. West took his ace, carefully cashed the diamond ace, and then led a second club. East ruffed, but that was the last defensive trick. Down 200.

East was extremely caustic about West's cashing of the diamond ace, pointing out that if West had kept that card for an entry, East could have ruffed two clubs. West said that he was afraid he might lose the diamond ace; that East, after ruffing a club, might try to cash a second heart trick, thinking West had started with a singleton.

"Bunk!" East snorted inelegantly. "Did you ever hear of the suit preference signal? All you had to do after you won with the club ace was to return the club deuce, and that would have told me I could put you back in with the lower of the side suits, namely diamonds. Besides, you were virtually marked with two aces for your double."

N. U. Committee Drafts Post-War Expansion Plans

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

A program for a vastly enlarged post-war Northwestern university was announced yesterday by President Franklyn Bliss Snyder. He said a newly formed administrative committee under the chairmanship of Dean Kenneth E. Olson of the Medill school of journalism, would at once draft the new program.

Expansion of faculties, classroom buildings, and dormitories is involved in the program facing the committee, which also includes Dean Ovid Eshbach of the technological institute, Dr. Donald Hudson, administrative officer of the school of liberal arts, and Dean Charles Freeman of the school of dentistry.

"We know that we must expect an increased enrollment after the war," said Dean Olson. "If the experience of the universities at the end of the last war is any criterion, this will be no temporary boom.

"We know that we shall have to build new dormitories for both men and women; we must provide new educational buildings," Dean Olson explained. "We must build an eminent faculty to meet coming responsibilities. We have in mind the fact that the honorably discharged veterans, for whom the government has promised from one to four years of education, will constitute a new element in our student body, and will require new types of educational opportunity and guidance."

Dean Olson will be relieved of a part of this administrative work in the school of journalism to lead his committee's studies, with Prof. Charles L. Allen assuming added administrative responsibility.

Air Lines Expected to Hire Ex-WACs as Technicians

The women's army corps recruiting conference at Fort Sheridan yesterday was told that commercial air lines after the war would provide many jobs for WAC trained technicians. Col. Carl Z. Hinkle, deputy personnel director for the 6th service command, told the WACs that Jack Fry, president of Transcontinental Western Air Lines, had predicted that many of the 45,000 future employes of the line would be former WACs.

SOX SPLIT; CUBS LOSE TWO BEFORE 39,576

YANKS BEATEN, 11 TO 3, AFTER WINNING, 10 TO 1

Derry and Trosky Hit Home Runs.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[BOX SCORE ON NEXT PAGE.]

New York, Aug. 13.—The White Sox and the New York Yankees, who formerly played vital parts in the so-called 1944 American league pennant race, this afternoon split a double header, the Chicagoans winning the second game, 11 to 3, after getting slapped down, 10 to 1, in the first affair. It was hotter than you know what, but 24,375 paid to see the sweat soaked antics of the two also-ran outfits.

If you want all the details of the scoring during the terrible afternoon you might send a self addressed envelope to Jimmy Dykes or Joe McCarthy. However, we are strong enough to give you a few of the high lights, including the information that the split brought the season record of the teams against each other to 10 victories for the Sox and six for the Yankees. Last year the Sox were proud of having won 10 out of 22 from the New Yorkers. The teams will play again tomorrow and Tuesday, and have one more series in Chicago.

Grove Wins, but Loses to Heat.

Since the Sox won their second victory of the trip by taking the second game it might be well to start with that one.

Orval Grove was the winning pitcher, tho he kept his record clear in regard to finishing games. Orval lost and failed to finish five games on the Sox's last eastern trip and he collapsed from the heat today after striking out Bud Metheny to end the sixth inning. He pitched well while he was in, tho he didn't have to bear down artistically after the Sox had made three runs in the first inning off Hank Borowy and six in the third off Borowy and Emerson Roser.

Trosky Hits Ninth Homer.

The Sox made one run in the fourth, then bothered to make only one more the rest of the way. Hal Trosky knocked his No. 9 homer in the first inning and the shot seemed to demoralize the Yanks. Or it might have been the heat, after all the base running they had to do in thumping Bill Dietrich in the first game.

The first game really ended in the third inning when Russ Derry, recent Yank addition, knocked a homer with the bases loaded. Another Yankee newcomer, Mel Queen, held the Sox to five hits, three of them in the third inning, in which the Chicagoans tied the score briefly at 1 to 1.

May Have Disciplined Dietrich.

Manager Dykes used up only four pitchers in the boiling enterprise, two in each game. There might have been a touch of discipline in the fact he kept Dietrich at work for seven innings in the first game.

It was Bill's third defeat since he broke his all-time high by achieving his 13th victory of the season. Joe Haynes pitched the eighth.

Grove went as far as he could in the second game and Jake Wade pitched the last three innings.

Hills and Vales.

O, hills that rim the valleys!
To you I lift my eyes,
Untouched by time and tumult
You thrust toward the skies.
Upon your tranquil bosom
Light rests the winter's snow,
Serene your heights, untroubled,
Amid the blasts that blow.
Upon your summits glimmer
The first faint streaks of dawn,
And there the kiss of sunset
Clings when day is gone.

I love the charm of valleys,
The lush and fruitful plain,
Where brooks wind thru the meadows
And waving fields of grain.
Here men are drawn together,
And laugh, and love, and toil,
Learning to live as neighbors
Upon this friendly soil.
Something of faith grows constant
And cheer revives again,
While hills above keep vigil

WALDORF AND ALL-STAR AIDS MAP OFFENSE

Shift 3 Players in Plans for Bears.

Call for Musicians

MUSICIANS who wish to join the College All-Star band, which will appear in Dyche stadium the night of the All-Star game, Aug. 30, are asked to communicate with Ray Dvorak, director of bands at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis.

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[ALL-STAR ROSTER ON NEXT PAGE.]

The All-Star football coaches unanimously approved an outline of offensive strategy at a staff meeting immediately after dinner yesterday noon and put the plan into effect in the subsequent drill of the collegians who are preparing for the charity game with the Chicago Bears in Dyche stadium Aug. 30.

Lynn Waldorf, head coach of the college staff for the 11th game sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., met with his assistants at 2:30 p. m. Those present were A. N. [Bo] McMillin of Indiana; Henry Frnka, Tulsa; Jeff Cravath, Southern California, and Wes Fry, Northwestern's back field coach. The staff concurred in plans which had been discussed Saturday night and which had been in process of formulation for several weeks.

Passing, Kicking Stressed.

The drill yesterday morning again stressed fundamental passing and routine kicking. In the afternoon—the third workout for the All-Stars—the men were assigned positions and fundamental plays were released. Waldorf also announced three shifts in assignment of personnel.

Loren La Prade of Stanford, listed as guard, was moved to center. Meredith Cushing, captain of the Cornell university 1943 eleven, who has had experience as a blocking back as well as at center, was moved to the former position. Bob Ravensberg, Indiana university guard, was shifted to end for the same reason.

44 Report for Practice.

Forty-four All-Stars reported for practice yesterday morning. Several of the remaining members are due today, including Cpl. Paul Sarringhaus, half back on Ohio State's 1942 Western conference championship eleven, who is coming from Camp Campbell, Ky. Other service men will report by mid-week when their regular leaves begin. These players are donating their own time to participation in the charity football game.

The All-Stars' kickers in yesterday's drills were Steve Van Buren, Louisiana half back; Ken Keuper, Georgia quarter back; Lt. Bob Ruman, Arizona half back, and Roy McKay, Texas full back. Ruman, who starred for three years at Arizona, played last season for Fort Riley, Kas. At Arizona Ruman once threw four touchdown passes in a game against Kansas State.

Keuper Rated Fine Blocker.

Keuper, veteran of Georgia's last appearance in the Rose Bowl, is the only member of the quartet of kickers who did not double in the forward passing assignment. Keuper comes with a high rating as a blocker and field general.

The other passers yesterday were Sgt. Charles Trippi, also of Georgia, who played with Keuper in the Rose Bowl against U. C. L. A., and Ralph Park, the rugged Texas half back.

The group of ends received particular attention yesterday. Eight of the 10 players listed have reported and with the addition of Ravensberg, nine were available for the offensive maneuvers. Absentees yesterday were Pvt. Bill Huber of Notre Dame, who held a starting assignment against Washington a year ago, and John Yonakor, Notre Dame's towering flanker of the 1943 national championship eleven.

Two Ends to Join Bears.

Abe Croft, Southern Methodist, and Jack Morton, Missouri, in this group of ends, are slated to play for the Bears after the All-Star game. Croft has signed a contract with the National Football league champions, but Morton may return to Missouri where he needs a few additional hours' credit to receive his degree and thus is eligible to play a fourth season for the Tigers.

West's Negro Stars Defeat East, 7 to 4

The West Negro All-Stars, made up of Negro American league players, put on a five run fifth inning rally before 46,247 paying customers in Comiskey park yesterday to win the 12th annual contest against the East, representing the Negro National league, 7 to 3. The West's victory evened the series at six all.

Verdel Mathis, diminutive Memphis Red Sox southpaw, was the winning pitcher. He left the field at the end of the third inning with the score 2 to 1 in favor of the West.

Ted Radcliffe of Birmingham, the West catcher, hit a home run into the lower left deck of the stand in the fifth inning and was given a suit of clothes, a $25 war bond, and a handful of greenbacks from the fans. The West players carried him on their shoulders to the dugout after a parade in front of the third base box seats.

Josh Gibson's 440 foot drive in the eighth inning hit the amplifiers in center field and bounded back onto the playing field.

The party will arrive at the conditioning base late this afternoon and training will open tomorrow morning.

THEIR ONE THOUGHT—STOPPING BEARS

Plotting an offensive system that can score against the Chicago Bears and a defense to stop the quick opening Bear attack is the task of this All-Star board of strategy. ## 12 BEARS TOLD: PULL PUNCHES ---AT THE TABLE

BY EDWARD PRELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Collegeville, Ind., Aug. 13.—The 12 fat men of the Bears heard a stirring ultimatum today as the professional football champions' drill entered its second week. The dozen were given weight standards which must be met by the night of Aug. 30 when they enter the arena against the College All-Stars in Evanston.

This seems to be one of the classic cruelties of football. The Bears found a training site where food points were as useless as Confederate bills. Heaping dishes are on the tables when the athletes storm the dining room at 7:30 a. m., 12:30 p. m., and 6:30 p. m. Yet these 12 fat men, most of whom are fat because they like to eat, must pull their punches with knife and fork.

Babartsky in Captain's Role.

Captain of the fat men is Al Babartsky, the tackle who was a member of college football's most famous line—Fordham's seven blocks of granite. Well, Al now has a little suet mixed in with the hard rock. He must taper off from a plump 240 to 225 for the All-Star game, else like his fellow sufferers, forfeit $50 for the extra pounds. The other 11, their present weights and goal follow: Bulldog Turner, 258-240; Gary Flamiglietti, 249-238; Jake Sweeney, 259-240; Ed Simonich, 237-227; Doug McEnulty, 237-227; Dom Sigillo, 235-225; Fred Mundee, 227-217; Pete Gudauskas, 225-215; Elmo Kelly, 225-215; Jimmy Fordham, 225-215; Paul Podmajersky, 224-214.

Babartsky caused a sensation last evening when he sat down at a table, sneered at its contents, then cried to the other fat men, "Follow me." Al marched out alone and he has not made that mistake again.

Work 8 Hours a Day.

The hot sun and double workouts are valuable allies of the dieting process and it is unlikely any of the boys will have to deposit $50 into the Bear treasury. After tonight's meeting in Drexel hall, where the champions are quartered at St. Joseph's college, they had completed 40 hours of work in five days. This morning and afternoon work-outs each average three hours and the night meetings two hours.

This afternoon the squad, which now numbers 41, put on pads and whaled away at the tackling dummy. Within the next few days the first of perhaps three scrimmages will be held. This will give the coaches their first chance to weigh the merits of their unprecedented number of recruits. No matter how impressive several of the newcomers have been, a true line cannot be obtained until their reactions under fire are noted.

The Bears Learn the T.

Scrimmage has been delayed because of the necessity to acquaint the squad with the T formation, which features timing, deception, and countless maneuvers. The Bears have eight or 10 types of end runs, for instance, and perhaps even more ways to make off tackle smashes.

Ray Nolting, George Musso, and Andy Grant are expected to show up tomorrow and the coaches, apparently in a fining mood, said that players would be assessed $25 for each day they are tardy in reporting.

Bring on those Bears! This All-Star trio arrived yesterday in time to participate in the first double drill as the collegiate squad began full scale practice for their game with the professional champions Aug. 30. From left to right they are Half Back Charley Trippi of Georgia, Tackle Walter Barnes of Louisiana, and End George Dick from Kansas.

Pro-Ladies' Meet Today Tops Big Week

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The annual pro-ladies tournament of the Illinois section of the Professional Golfers' association and the Chicago Women's District Golf association will be held this afternoon at the Sunset Ridge Country club, opening another busy week of golf in the Chicago district. Play will be at 18 holes, with selective drives and alternate shots.

Aside from the Builders' Tee club's regular session at Big Run, tomorrow's program is vacant, but the remainder of the week presents a steady schedule. The national professional tournament is being revived today at Spokane, Wash., and will continue thru next Sunday, altho the Illinois section will not be represented. Many of the local professionals will be tuning up for the valuable All-American event, beginning with preliminary trials next Monday at the Tam o' Shanter.

Ridgemoor's Jabberwalk, one of the oldest invitational events of the district, will be held Wednesday. President Tom Griffin and Chairman Fred Lietzow expect a record field. The Park Ridge Plae Dae, another long established invitational, is set for Thursday. Friday will see the annual Illinois state Southpaw tourney of the Chicago District Golf association at Ravisloe; the annual Buggy Ride tournament at Hinsdale, and the opening of the 29th Glen Oak Roundup, which will end Saturday.

PAULINE BETZ, SEGURA UPSET IN TENNIS MEET

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 13 (AP).—Bill Talbert of Indianapolis and Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Cal., came thru today with two smashing upsets to win the men's and women's Eastern Grass Court tennis championships at the Westchester Country club.

Talbert upset Francisco Segura of Ecuador, the defending champion, 9-7, 6-4, 6-4, while Miss Brough trounced Pauline Betz of Los Angeles, the national champion, 6-3, 6-1. It was Segura's first defeat in major tourney play this year.

ALL-STARS HOPE LUCKMAN WILL PLAY FOR BEARS

The College All-Stars, tho they form the group that will benefit the most if Ensign Sid Luckman is missing from the Chicago Bears' lineup the night of Aug. 30, paradoxically enough are among those hoping most strongly that the veteran Bear quarter back can be present and in uniform.

It was Luckman who paced the Bears to the professional football title last fall with phenomenal passing and almost errorless ball handling in his all important T formation assignment. Without Luckman, now on duty in the maritime service, the Bears will be lacking probably their most important offensive cog. With him, they can virtually forget their other personnel losses.

Want Bears at Full Strength.

The All-Stars want to meet the Bears at full strength. As Bill Aldworth, tackle from Minnesota, commented, "If we beat the Bears with Luckman, it will be just that much more satisfying to us; if we lose we will know we lost to a championship team." All-Star coaches and fellow squad members all voiced the same sentiment. This to them is their greatest football game, and rightly enough they want the opponent to be at full strength.

Abe Croft, 190 pound end from Southern Methodist, never was north of the Lone Star state until he entrained for Evanston and Dyche stadium. He was the only member of the S. M. U. team last fall who started every game, and served as acting captain after both co-captains had been called into service before the season opened.

Texans Like Those Bears.

"Down in Texas the Bears are recognized as football's greatest team," said Croft, "even tho most of the fans are more interested in Washington. That's because of Sammy Baugh, the former T. C. U. star, being with the Redskins. But the Bears have shown often enough that they have a definite edge over Washington, Baugh and all.

"Being a part of this squad is certainly the greatest thrill I ever have experienced, and it could be topped only by being picked to start against the Bears."

PHILLIES TAKE FIRST GAME, 3-2; WIN SECOND, 7-6

Errors Prove Costly in Opener.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Mr. Charley Grimm's Cubs were altogether too generous for their own welfare or the happiness of 38,576 of their paying Wrigley field patrons and 1,000 service men yesterday. Much to the discomfiture of Lefty Bob Chipman they slipped a 3 to 2 decision to the Phillies in the first game of a double header, after which, by way of appreciation, the visitors revealed their big hearted tendencies. But the Cubs wouldn't have it that way, so passed up the second decision, 7 to 6.

All of the Cubs' underground work against Chipman in the first game was engineered by Stan Hack to give the enemy two of its runs, the other being due to a home run by Ron Northey, this hit proving the needed margin as the result of the Cubs' gentle work as batters.

Phils Take 5-0 Lead.

The Cubs made their most generous stroke in the second game just when Claude Passeau needed a little extra help. With errors they did what they could to fill the bases whereupon Northey was heard from again. He drove 'em all home by doubling the Phils into a 5 to 0 lead.

Paul Derringer and Hy Vandenberg each did perfect one inning jobs after the fifth but Paul Erickson got into the show in the eighth and that was the end of the tie. That Northey fellow led with a single and with one out, Johnny Peacock singled and Northey decided to stop at third and watch Andy Pafko's throw to the plate. Erickson intercepted the throw and in trying to nip Peacock at second, threw wild so Northey resumed his homeward journey. Then Ford Mullen singled to score Peacock with the run that kept them in front after the Cubs had scored once in the ninth off Charles Schanz on a pass to Dom Dallessandro and a two bagger by Pafko.

Hack's Throw Goes Wild.

A pass and a pair of singles put Passeau in a one run hole in the first inning of the second game and altho it was difficult at times, he managed to get along until Stewart opened the fifth with a double, then reached third safely a moment later when Passeau tried to throw him out on Kennedy's bunt. Mullen forced Kennedy, then Hack let loose a wild throw on Adams and Lupien beat out a hit, filling the bases. Northey cleaned 'em for a 5 to 0 score by doubling to right.

Lou Novikoff batting for Passeau at the start of the home fifth tripled and scored on Hack's fly. Merullo walked, went to third on Cavarretta's single and home on Nicholson's fly. Dallessandro then singled and a pass to Pafko filled the bases, whereupon Karl made his second rescue appearance. The Cubs crept up with another run in the sixth on singles by Williams and Bill Schuster, batting for Derringer, and a pair of Philly errors.

The Phils' comedy in the tying seventh began with Mullen booting Dallessandro's roller. Pafko singled and away went Karl to make room for Schanz. Dallessandro scored while Johnson was forcing Pafko and Lupien helped out by throwing into left field in attempting to force Johnson on Williams' grounder. Johnson went to third on the error and scored the tying run on Pinch Man Ival Goodman's force of Williams. But the tie was short lived.

Hack Commits 2 Errors.

The first of the unhappy incidents for Chipman in the opening game was the homer pumped into the right field seats by Northey in the second inning. The next flurry came in the fourth when Lupien led with a scratch hit and proceeded to second when Hack heaved the ball into the dugout. He scored on a couple of outs, one of them a force play at second in which Hughes and Northey jammed, the former retiring with a blood blister on his left foot. Then Hack duplicated his wild throw on Mullen in the sixth with none out. Adams sacrificed and Lupien turned loose a healthy fly that registered the decisive run.

Cavarretta started the Cubs' sixth with a triple to left and was driven in by Nicholson's single to right. Dallessandro cracked a single into center, sending Nicholson to third and ending the Lee regime. Nicholson scampered home while Pafko was rapping one of Rescuer Karl's pitches into a double play.

SPARTA, NECAXA CAPTURE NIGHT SOCCER GAMES

Jimmy Wolf scored two goals late in the second period to give Sparta a 4 to 2 victory over the Slovaks in their soccer game played under the lights in Sparta stadium last night. Sparta won after Necaxa had beaten a team made up of Italian and Workers players, 5 to 0.

Pete Varthalamas' goal after 23 minutes of play gave Sparta the lead against the Slovaks, but Eddie Svancara scored for the Slovaks near the end of the first half and Vic Absil's goal sent them into the lead in the second period. Mario Myrion equalized for Sparta before Wolf got his winning goals.

POLISH PREMIER RETURNS WITH BOUNDARY ISSUE

Exile Group, Eden to Get Details on Red Rift.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Polish Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, who left Moscow Thursday after a breakdown in his talks with the Communist Polish National Committee of Liberation on the future of Poland, arrived here by air today.

It is assumed that the premier immediately made his report to the Polish government in London. With his foreign minister, Tadeusz Romer, he is scheduled to lunch tomorrow with British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden when it is expected that he will give Eden details of his discussions in Moscow.

One of the main reasons for the breakdown, it was reported here, was the committee's insistence on turning over to Russia all Polish territory east of the so-called Curzon line as demanded by Stalin and at the same time calling for a new frontier running at one point barely 55 miles east of Berlin. The committee did not lay claim to Lwow whose ownership is left vague even by the Curzon line frontier formula.

Frontier Delineated.

According to reports reaching London, Poland's western frontier as envisaged by the committee runs along the Oder and the Neisse rivers. These two rivers, the committee claimed, would form the shortest strategic frontier possible between Poland and Germany and would give Poland a coast on the Baltic sea roughly 250 miles long instead of the 40 mile pre-war coast line. Whether this project is seriously backed by Stalin is not yet certain but since the talks took place under the eyes of the soviet government there seems little doubt that Moscow is fully aware of the committee's plans.

It was pointed out by some diplomatic observers here that there are two Neisse rivers, both tributaries of the Oder, one of which runs some distance east of the other.

Dispute Widens Breach.

MOSCOW, Aug. 13 (AP).—Soviet resentment over reports that the Red army had abandoned Warsaw's underground army to its fate raised fresh obstacles today for an agreement on Polish unity between the government in exile and the Russian-backed National Committee of Liberation.

The soviet government, thru the official news agency Tass, disclaimed all responsibility for the premature insurrection in Warsaw. Gen. Bor's patriot troops in the city are ringed by German forces, while the Red army hammers at the suburbs.

This statement declared that the Polish exile government never attempted to establish liaison with the Red army command. "Misunderstanding or calumny of the soviet command" was the reaction to foreign reports that the patriots had contacted the Red army but received no aid.

WICKARD FINDS CROP OUTLOOK IN NATION GOOD

America's over-all food production picture is good despite severe drouth in parts of the midwest, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard said here yesterday. He was in Chicago en route from Washington to Iron River, Mich., to inspect some experimental reforestation work.

Live stock production is good, he said, altho milk output is falling off temporarily because of dry pastures. He predicted bumper crops in Minnesota, South Dakota, Nebraska, and Kansas.

"There will be plenty for every one to eat this winter," he said, "altho we may not be able to get everything we want every day."

STRITCH TO TALK AT ANNUAL IRISH FETE TOMORROW

The Most Rev. Samuel A. Stritch, Catholic archbishop of Chicago, will speak at the annual Irish day celebration tomorrow in Harms park, 4207 N. Western av. Bishop Bernard J. Sheil will be honorary chairman of the day.

Thousands of Chicagoans of Irish ancestry are expected to attend the event, which will honor Irish-American war heroes.

Proceeds from the celebration will go to Chicago service men's organizations, the Catholic Youth organization, and other charitable groups.

THE GUMPS

FATHER HAS JOB FOR D-DAY VET, 15, IF HE RETURNS

Mother Says Boy Will Try to Stay in War.

Gerald Haddon, the 15 year old Chicago boy who is a veteran of the Normandy invasion beach operations, can be a lawyer if he wants to, but his parents hope he will be a printer instead and work in his dad's shop in the event he is discharged from the Coast Guard for being underage.

"But if we know Gerald he won't want to be sent home and will try every means possible to remain in service," his mother said.

Gerald, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Haddon, 4150 Harrison st., couldn't wait until he was old enough to enlist and last September falsified the date on his birth certificate and joined the Coast Guard.

Takes Part in Invasion.

Saturday, after he had spent eight months of foreign service, including action on D-day and countless trips across the channel on craft carrying reenforcements, his true age was discovered by an officer. He will probably be sent home.

"He coaxed so long for our permission to enlist that we didn't object when he showed us his enlistment papers," the mother explained.

Mrs. Haddon recalled that Gerald almost got into the navy when he was 14. He had passed all examinations and was standing in line to be sworn in when his father telephoned the recruiting officer and disclosed the boy's age.

"After that," the mother said, "he just sat around the house and brooded. He never did forgive one of his pals for telling his dad he was enlisting."

He Invests in Bonds.

She added that every one in the neighborhood knew Gerald's age when he enlisted in the Coast Guard almost a year ago and said the family had wondered why his age hadn't been revealed before now.

Gerald has invested in bonds regularly since he has been in uniform, his father said.

Brother, 13, Envious of Him.

Yesterday the Haddon family sat around the living room in the family apartment above the print shop and talked about Gerald. Jackson, 13, was envious of his big brother and wondered if the war would be over before he could enlist. The two sisters, Betty Jane, 21, and June Ruth, 20, discussed joining the WAVES.

'O'CALLAGHAN' OF IRELAND DIES IN DUBLIN AT 80

DUBLIN, Aug. 13 (AP). — Col. George O'Callaghan-Westropp, 80, bearer of the ancient Irish title "The O'Callaghan" and aide de camp to three kings, died here today.

Born at Attyflin Park, Limerick county, Feb. 18, 1864, he was graduated from Cheltenham college and the Royal Military college at Sandhurst. In 1882 he became a lieutenant in the Royal Irish Rifles and in 1888 a captain.

In 1885 he assumed the name and arms of Westropp in addition to those of O'Callaghan in compliance with the will of his maternal uncle, Capt. Ralph Westropp. O'Callaghan-Westropp was named aide de camp to King Edward VII. in 1905, to King George V. in 1910, and to King Edward VIII. in 1936.

PERMIT TO MAKE CIVILIAN GOODS EXPECTED TODAY

OPA Scheduled to Fix Prices.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13 (AP).—The war production board's long-awaited order permitting limited civilian goods manufacture, due to be issued tomorrow and effective Tuesday, will be followed shortly by an OPA ruling on prices.

Manufacturers probably will be required to apply for an individual ceiling on each item they are permitted to make, price officials said, with the ceilings to be determined mainly by the costs of production. Price Administrator Bowles is scheduled to disclose OPA's policy at a news conference Thursday.

Few Firms to Act.

Since only a comparative handful of firms is expected to qualify for civilian goods production in the next few months because of curbs on nonessential use of man power, OPA sources said little attempt will be made to set industry-wide ceilings or pricing formulas.

In most cases the ceilings will be set by OPA field offices rather than by headquarters in Washington. This will speed the process, OPA said, and give field officials training for the flood of pricing activity expected when large scale reconversion begins.

Where a large part of an industry is reconverting simultaneously—as in the case of piano manufacturers, the decision will be made in Washington.

Plan Automatic System.

When demobilization of industry starts in earnest, officials said, an "automatic" pricing system is likely. A formula will be provided under which firms will compute their own prices, subject to review. If OPA does not object within a stated period of time, the price will go into effect.

The coming WPB order, as previously described by Chairman Nelson, will permit WPB field offices to approve production of civilian goods by manufacturers who can show plant capacity and labor not needed for the war effort.

The order was opposed by the army, navy, and war man power commission on grounds that civilian production might lure workers from war plants. Altho Nelson won his point, War Mobilization Director Byrnes last week issued a directive giving WMC veto power in any case where the man power program might be harmed.

Victim of Stabbing, 74, Found in Water Filled Tub

The body of Thomas Grant, 74, a retired department store clerk, stabbed near the heart, was found last night in a water filled bath tub in his home at 4713 Woodlawn av. A pair of scissors was found near-by. Police listed his death as a probable suicide.

MORE BUILDING DONE BY PRIVATE FUNDS THIS YEAR

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Private construction gradually is creeping back to its normal position in building activity after having been overshadowed almost completely by publicly financed projects since the start of the war.

A survey by the F. W. Dodge corporation, fact-finding organization in the construction industry, showed today the trend most noticeably in residential construction. The survey covered 37 states east of the Rocky mountains.

In the residential field public construction in the first seven months of 1943 represented 61 per cent of the total. In the same period this year it represented only 35 per cent.

In the nonresidential field, public construction accounted for 92 per cent in the first seven months of 1943, compared with 76 per cent this year.

Altho the July total construction volume of $190,539,000 was $6,878,000 above that month in 1943, the seven months total of $1,150,760,000 was far behind the 1943 aggregate of $2,034,933,000.

Studebaker to Use Direct Dealer Auto Sales System

Paul G. Hoffman, president of Studebaker corporation, announced yesterday that direct dealers would be used after the war instead of the company's former merchandising system thru distributors. "Under the new plan the factory will take over all wholesaling functions and all contracts with dealers will be direct," Hoffman said.

Treasury Calls 4 Per Cent Bond Issue for Payment

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13 (AP).—The treasury today called for redemption on Dec. 15 of all outstanding 4 per cent treasury bonds of 1944-'45. About 1 billion 37 million dollars of the bonds is outstanding.

JOINT TENANCY INCOME.

My wife and I have been transferring stocks previously held in our names separately to ourselves in joint tenancy with right of survivorship. How are the dividends from the jointly held stocks to be apportioned between us in separate federal income tax returns? May the income be considered as half mine and half hers?—W. B.

Answer: The general rule now seems well established that, if separate returns are filed by husband and wife, the income from property held in this manner is taxable to the spouse who contributed the property in creating the joint tenancy.

Thus if the husband or wife transferred all the property to the joint account, the contributor would be taxable on the entire income, regardless of the record title. If both husband and wife contributed property, each would be taxable on the income in the same proportions as their contributions, not necessarily half and half. The presumption under state law of equal ownership is not regarded as controling.

Exceptions to the rule may apply under some circumstances. Under federal gift tax regulations it is provided that if A pays for property and has the title conveyed to himself and B as joint owners with survivorship rights which may be defeated by either party severing his interest, there is a gift to B amounting to one-half of the total value. Where this is the case, it might perhaps be held that B is subject to tax on half the income.

AMERICAN PLAN TO HELP WORLD TRADE OFFERED

Bretton Woods Pact Hit by Rep. Dewey.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 13 [Special].—A substitute plan for post-war financing of foreign trade to replace the international monetary scheme developed at the Bretton Woods conference is offered by Rep. Dewey [R., Ill.] in a speech prepared for delivery tomorrow in the house of representatives.

Rep. C. S. Dewey.

He asserted the Bretton Woods plan, which was reached last month at a conference in New Hampshire of delegates from 44 allied nations is defective for the reason that the risks involved far outweigh possible benefits to the United States.

Under it, he said, this country has only 28 per cent of the total vote, debtor nations holding the other 72 per cent, and the United States might find itself in the predicament of holding 2¾ billion dollars in foreign currencies of questionable value in exchange for American dollars.

U. S. Machinery Urged.

Instead, he proposes that the United States develop its own international credit machinery in cooperation with private capital to solve the problem of surpluses "with a foreknowledge of what, if any, our losses may be."

To do this, he would increase the capital of the Export-Import bank from 700 million to one billion dollars and set up an advisory council of 12 whose duty would be to submit foreign trade policy decisions to congress for necessary legislative action and to advise the bank in international operations connected with foreign trade.

"In offering these suggestions," he said, "I again wish to emphasize the point that while it will be advantageous to the American people to participate in the redevelopment of the purchasing power of foreign countries thru aiding them to re-establishing their wealth producing possibilities, yet we should maintain an intelligently selfish point of view.

Anxious for Own Veterans.

"Frankly, I am more anxious that our returning soldiers are provided with good jobs and the opportunities of success in their lives than I am as regards the future of the soldiers of other countries, and I further believe that the person who looks after his own business achieves greater success than does the person who surrenders the power of decision to some one else."

In emphasizing the dangers inherent in the Bretton Woods plan, he cited the case of Greece, which is given a quota of 40 million dollars in the international monetary fund.

"At present, it is most difficult to state what would be the value of Greek currency, but for the sake of argument, the managers of the fund might assign a value of 1 cent to the Greek drachma," he said.

Operation of Fund Described.

"Once the fund would be put into operation, the Greek government could come to the fund and in each year until its quota was exhausted, purchase one-quarter of its quota, equivalent to 10 million dollars of any currency that it desired, paying for it with 1 billion of their drachmas.

"It is obvious that at the present time and for a number of years in the future the principal market in which any purchases probably can be made will be the American market; hence, the Greek government more than likely would request dollars to be used in our market for the purchase of machinery or any commodity it required.

"What happened in the case of the Greeks would happen in the case of all the other countries that have been devastated and desire to rebuild themselves. As a result, there would be a constant demand for the United States dollar quota in the fund, to be paid for by currencies of somewhat doubtful value until all of the dollars were exhausted.

Mutual Dealing One Goal.

"I will admit that probably I have oversimplified the description of the operation, and it is the hope of proponents of the fund that with the growth of international trade the members of the fund would trade among one another and the exclusive demand for the dollar would diminish.

"This, however, is only wishful thinking, and there is danger that the fund might be unable to carry on its operation due to the exhaustion of dollars and be forced to liquidate, in which case the United States would become the possessor of at least 2 billion 750 million dollars of foreign currencies for which it had little or no use, but in exchange for which the American taxpayers would have delivered to the countries operating thru the fund 2 billion 750 million dollars of real wealth, as evidenced by American machinery and commodities."

In suggesting the Export-Import bank as a suitable agency for financing post-war foreign trade, Dewey said that in the eight years of its active operation it has had a turnover of 1 billion 275 million dollars, has made a profit on its operations, and up to date has suffered no loss. Likewise, he said, it has operated in harmony with the private financial houses of the nation and has entered fields not covered by ordinary financial institutions.

He urged congress to consider the development and increase of activities of the Export-Import bank as America's method of participating in world reconstruction "rather than becoming a partner in any great international fund in which the interests of the United States might become subordinated to those of other associates."

Among the augmented powers to be granted the bank, in addition to the increase of capital, he suggested changing the bank's charter to set up an advisory board of 12 members, some to be filled by members of the government and others to be chosen for their technical knowledge of the business world.

Broad Fields Included.

These members, he suggested, should represent labor, agriculture, critical materials, surpluses, international policy, geographical considerations, political domestic policy, domestic finance, advertising and servicing, transportation by sea and transportation by air, and financing of foreign trade.

"The charter of the bank would further provide for a technical board of directors composed of government employes who will oversee the executive operations of the bank in line with the general recommendations of the advisory board," he said.

He predicted that the United States will emerge from the war with a public debt of 300 billion dollars. He contrasted this with the 26 billion dollar debt at the termination of the World war, and noted that lend-lease alone, as of last June, totaled 28 billion dollars, or 2 billions more than the total public debt incurred to fight the World war.

Economy Held Necessary.

"A public debt of 300 billion dollars, even for as great a country as our own, is an incomprehensible figure," he said, "but I believed that it can be serviced and steadily reduced, provided, first the financial policy of the government follows a course of economy and, second, that the government follows a policy of full production by all phases of agriculture and industry, which will have the effect of maintaining a high national income. The success of such a policy must stem from the people themselves, actuated by individual initiative and desire for gain and not from a regimented, bureaucratic economy."

FOUR PERCENT TREASURY BONDS OF 1944-54

NOTICE OF CALL FOR REDEMPTION

To Holders of 4 percent Treasury Bonds of 1944-54, and Others Concerned:

1. Public notice is hereby given that all outstanding 4 percent Treasury Bonds of 1944-54, dated December 15, 1924, are hereby called for redemption on December 15, 1944, on which date interest on such bonds will cease.

2. Holders of these bonds may, in advance of the redemption date, be offered the privilege of exchanging all or any part of their called bonds for other interest-bearing obligations of the United States, in which event public notice will hereafter be given and an official circular governing the exchange offering will be issued.

3. Full information regarding the presentation and surrender of the bonds for cash redemption under this call will be found in Department Circular No. 666, dated July 21, 1941.

First Peace Year's Gasoline Need Expected to Be Smaller

Consumption of gasoline in the immediate post-war period will be about 25 per cent below pre-war requirements, the American Chemical society predicted yesterday. A survey indicated the decrease will stem from an expected drop in the number of serviceable cars that will be available to consumers, the society said.

The survey, made by Alberta H. Adams and B. H. Well of Gulf Research and Development company, indicated, however, that demand later would rise to a record peak.

20 Million Cars Estimated.

"Consensus among automotive and petroleum experts indicates that some 20 million of the nation's pre-war total of nearly 30 million cars will remain in operating condition at the war's end, maintaining a market for gasoline at least 75 per cent of the pre-war level," it said. "A rapid recovery to or above normal pre-war use is expected to follow as new tires and cars come into production."

An important factor influencing the volume of post-war gasoline markets is the total of cars still operating on four usable tires at the end of the war, and another is the determination of how soon more cars can be put into operation after the war, the survey asserted.

"Easiest and quickest to put on the road are those needing only reconditioning and new tires," it said. "If the rubber is available, as it appears almost certain to be, molding capacity should be sufficient to put all operable cars back on the road in less than a year.

New Cars a Problem.

"The problem of getting new cars on the road is more serious. It is believed that less than half a normal year's production can come off the assembly lines in the first post-war year.

"Auxiliary automotive markets also will affect the gasoline outlook, inasmuch as military consumption should drop and commercial, farm, and civilian aviation consumption rise. These trends are likely to be sharp during the immediate post-war period and more gradual thereafter, except for aviation, which may rise sharply for some time."

People and Events

Col. Fred During, former director of military training for the 1st service command, has been made director of personnel and safety.

Harry E. Humphreys Jr., chairman of the finance committee of United States Rubber company, was named chairman of the new taxation committee of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Allen C. Chambers was named director of automotive sales of Bendix Products division of Bendix Aviation corporation. He succeeds Frank B. Willis, who was appointed manager of war contract terminations and settlements.

Three women war workers in the Joliet plane of United States Steel corporation's American Steel and Wire company have completed a year's service without missing a day from the job. They are Lois Kalb, Lockport; Mary Ambrosio and Bernadine Kastelic, Joliet.

Corning Glass works announced the appointment of Eitel E. Shankin as Chicago district commercial sales representative of the consumer products division.

P. L. Smith, president, Middle West corporation, will discuss the outlook for public utilities before members of the National Security Traders' association at their annual meeting Aug. 25 and 26 in the Palmer House.

Ratify Child Labor Act, Is Plea to States

The National Small Business Men's association urged yesterday that those states which have not ratified the child labor amendment to the constitution, proposed by congress in 1924, do so and make the amendment part of national law by the war's end. Twenty-eight of the 36 states necessary to the amendment's adoption have voted ratification.

DeWitt Emery, president of the association, praised the patriotism of the teen-agers who have taken war time jobs to help relieve the man power shortage, but said that war veterans and dismissed adult war workers soon would need many of those jobs.

Would Suspend State Laws.

The amendment would give congress the power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age. It provides that the power of the states be unimpaired except that the operation of state laws shall be suspended to the extent necessary to give effect to legislation enacted by congress.

States that have ratified the proposed amendment are Alabama, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Utah, Washington, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming.

Would Reduce Delinquency.

"The juvenile delinquency problem of the last few years has been serious and widespread," Emery said. "It may result in part from the easy money available to children in war work. If we return these children to the classroom, we will go a long way toward solving the delinquency problem, better prepare our boys and girls for useful careers, and increase the jobs available for men and women after the war."

USERS HESITATE TO PLACE LARGE STEEL ORDERS

Cleveland, O., Aug. 13 (AP).—Steel consumers are showing increasing hesitancy to make forward commitments altho there has been no diminution in pressure for nearby delivery, the magazine Steel said today.

"Substantial forward buying and some directive allocations for nearby delivery are reported for radar, military trucks and various types of bombs. Shipbuilding is sustained by the urgent need for certain types of naval vessels and a substantial tonnage was placed recently for export railroad barges to be completed in mid-October," the publication said.

Story of Old Tragedy Breaks Thief Down.

Victor Zito of 1115 Hudson av., a cheese company employe, walked into the Chicago av. police station yesterday with his son, Bernard, 13, and a plea that authorities help the boy "straighten himself out." Sobbing, the boy's stepmother, Phyllis, backed up Zito's contention that they could no longer handle Bernard.

Bernard Zito.

Bernard, the father told Detective Thomas McManus, has been a problem far beyond his fifth grade status recently. Early this summer he disappeared from home for two weeks. Found in Lincoln park, he said he had slept under bushes and shined shoes to buy food.

Father's Pleas Vain.

Recently his behavior at home and in the neighborhood got worse. He stayed away from home more and more in unexplained absences. He referred to his new "tough friends" around the house and wouldn't tell where he met them or where he got his spending money. His father urged him to give up his associations.

Yesterday, when Chester Wycocski, 161 North av., went to the Zito home to say he had caught Bernard taking a coat from his automobile at the North av. beach, the father took direct action. He hurried to the beach and found the boy with two wallets containing money, also clothing. The next stop was the police station, where Bernard was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Old Tragedy Recalled.

Bernard tried to stick to his story that he found the stolen articles under a bush. But McManus remembered the story of another father and his son 24 years ago and told it to the lad.

"A fellow named Frank Piano shot his son, Frank Jr., who was 17, at Harrison and Halsted sts.," he told Bernard. "He was afraid the boy would end up a hoodlum because he bummed around with tough guys. Just before he died, the boy sobbed, 'I guess the old man knew best.'"

Bernard then admitted taking the stolen property as the owners swam. "What happened to his father?" he asked. "A jury acquitted him when he testified he wanted to save the boy's soul," the big detective answered.

Many Thefts at Beach.

Police have been searching for sneak thieves responsible for a wave of minor robberies at the crowded North av. beach. They hoped to find a clew in Bernard's "tough friends."

Bernard said there was "nothing to do" around the house. His stepmother sobbed out her efforts "to keep him a good boy." "Everytime I bought an ice cream soda for myself, I bought one for him," she said.

PASTOR IN FIGHT FOR TIRES FAILS TO HOLD SERVICE

McLeansboro, Ill., Aug. 13 [Special].—Members of the Baptist congregation at Dahlgren, 12 miles from here, waited vainly at their church today for the pastor, the Rev. H. F. Menke, and then returned to their homes without holding services when told the minister was unable to come from McLeansboro because his car lacked tires.

The minister, who charged the local ration board had denied him three new tires to replace three condemned as being worn out, had parked his car with two flat tires in the town square here Thursday night as a protest. The following night road oil was smeared by unknown persons on signs inside the car, protesting that the New Deal "opposes Christianity" and "has tires for beer and whisky trucks but none to go to church."

The Rev. Mr. Menke said today he had moved the car last night from its position in front of a drug store to another place on the town square, where it would not interfere with business. He said he will leave it there until forced by city officials to move it or until he is given new tires. Until he gets the tires, he said, he will be unable to conduct his church services at Dahlgren.

Ration board spokesmen denied they had discriminated against the pastor.

6 MILLION IDLE PREDICTED BY 3 ON ROUND TABLE

In the post-war reconversion period at least 6 million persons will be temporarily unemployed, three speakers on the University of Chicago Round Table broadcast agreed yesterday. They added that the government needs adequate plans to avoid greater or longer unemployment when war veterans are demobilized.

William H. Spencer, regional director of the war man power commission who is on leave from the university faculty, estimated the temporary unemployment at from 6 to 6½ million, but said it might go as high as 12 million. Post-war jobs will be needed for 55 million, 8 million more than were employed in 1940, he said.

Others participating in the Round Table were Neil H. Jacoby, professor of finance at the University of Chicago, and Robert Nathan, former chairman of the war production board's planning committee and present economic consultant of the French committee on national liberation.

MISS MARION CROWLEY.

Superior, Wis., Aug. 13 [Special].—Miss Marion Crowley, niece of Leo T. Crowley, foreign economic administrator, will christen the U. S. S. Kenosha in the Walter Butler Shipbuilders yard Aug. 25. Miss Crowley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Crowley of Beloit, Wis. Her father is president of a wholesale oil distributing company. The U. S. S. Kenosha is named after Kenosha county, Wisconsin, and is one of the "Ships for Victory" on the war program.

WAC RECEIVES 2 D. F. C.'S WON BY SON IN ITALY

A Fort Oglethorpe WAC took time out from her basic training the other day to receive two distinguished flying crosses and an air medal, won by her aviator son in Italy. The WAC is Pvt. Edna Jackson, former Chicagoan and widow of Maj. Campbell N. Jackson, who was commandant of cadets at the Morgan Park Military academy when he died three years ago. The son is Capt. Campbell Y. Jackson, former De Paul university student.

Capt. Jackson received the D. F. C.'s for important bombing missions in Austria and has six oak leaf clusters for his air medal. The medals were presented to his mother by Col. Thomas W. Steed at the request of the captain, when the colonel returned to the states on leave.

Pvt. Jackson worked for the casualty branch of the war department in Washington before enlisting in the WACs. Her son enlisted four years ago as he was completing his law work at the university. He served nine months in South America before going to Italy in December.

LOOT PHOTOGRAPHER'S STUDIO.

Theft of 65 dozen photographic plates and 42 dozen film holders, a lens and $50, from his studio at 1546 N. Clark st., was reported to police yesterday by Harry Fox, photographer. He placed the total loss at $485.
